Saigon Remnants Flee From Laos

American Support Pulling Out

Times News Services

KHE SANH — The remnants of South Vietnam's invasion forces fled across the border from Laos today under heavy Communist assault and U.S. support forces began pulling out of the country's northern border areas.

As the Laos operation drew to a close, North Vietnamese troops stepped up their attacks on the U.S. forces in the northerwest sector who backed the South Vietnamese in their 44-day drive to cut North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh trail.

North Vietnamese artillery, rockets, mortars and sappers hit the forward base of Khe Sanh near the Laotian border and eight other U.S. positions supporting the South Vietnamese in Laos.

GIs KILLED

The U.S. command reported seven Americans were killed and 40 wounded, but field reports said the casualties were higher.

Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported from the northern front that some U.S. helicopter units began pulling out of Khe Sanh and returning to their normal headquarters at Chu Lai and Phu Bai.

PROVIDED SUPPORT

Informed sources said it would be some time before the last U.S. units are withdrawn from western Quang Tri province, bordering Laos on the west and the demilitarized zone on the north.

About 10,000 U.S. troops were put into the sector Jan. 30 to act as a blocking force for the South Vietnamese and to support the Saigon forces with helicopters and supply movements.

It was understood that Khe Sanh itself would be closed within the next three weeks. Ham Nghi, the South Vietnamese forward command post for the operation nearby, now is in the process of closing out.

JETS HIT

DON'T COUNT NIXON OUT

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon clearly warned the pundits Monday night that they are running grave risks of being wrong when they speculate that he may not be a presidential candidate again next year.

The idea of voluntary retirement, raised by a television interviewer, is "quite premature," the U.S. president said. "I have made no decision with regard to what I will do in 1972 either for myself or the man who will run for vice-president."

The choice of words raised some doubts about the future of Vice-President Spiro Agnew, as the president did not take the opportunity to deny reports he may choose a Democrat, as Abraham Lincoln did in 1864, to be his running mate in 1972.

Ottawa-Home Oil Deal Collapses

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian government Tuesday withdrew its bid to acquire control of Home Oil Co. Ltd. and announced that private Canadian buyers were now negotiating for control of the company.

J. J. Greene, minister of energy, mines and resources, told the Commons that he had failed to reach a "firm understanding" in negotiations which began March 11.

He said he was now confident that a buyer would be found in the private sector who would maintain "Canadian ownership and full Canadian control of Home Oil."

The controversial negotiations to acquire control of Home Oil were begun after the government effectively blocked efforts by Home Oil's president, R. A. Brown, Jr., of Calgary, to sell his controlling shares to the Ashland Oil Co. Ltd. of Kentucky.

NO AUTHORITY

Acknowledging that it did not have the legislative authority to tell Brown what to do with his shares, the government first tried to find a Canadian buyer in the private sector. When this failed, the government began negotiations to acquire the shares itself to prevent them from falling into foreign hands.

Greene said it would not be in the best interests of either the government or Brown to disclose the reasons why the negotiations did not succeed.

He said Brown "understands the attitude of the Canadian government" that a sale to foreign interests would be unacceptable.

The minister said "Canadian buyers" were now negotiating with Brown and a sale to them would be "in accord with the government's objective."

He said the government would "continue to keep the situation under close surveillance."

Army Coup Failure Reported

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (AP) — Rebellious troops fought a gun battle with palace guards today in an abortive attempt to assassinate Sierra Leone Premier Saika Stevens and seize control of the government of the West African coastal country.

Government sources said guards shot and killed two soldiers and wounded several others when they tried to enter the premier's residence.

Several guards were wounded in the gun battle which heavily damaged the residence, the sources said.

STATION SEIZED

They said the rebel troops also seized the capital's radio station before they were overcome by government forces. Broadcasting from the station stopped during the abortive coup but the radio made no mention of the attempt.

Several members of the armed forces were arrested, the sources said.

(Neighboring Guinea declared a state of emergency following the attempted Guinean coup of the revolution radio reported. A broadcast monitored in Abidjan said the high command in Guinea had ordered "all military garrisons to be in a state of alert until further notice" and a close guard was ordered kept on the frontier with Sierra Leone.)

Laos Soldiers Retake Town Near Capital

Times News Services

VIENTIANE — Government troops have recaptured the closest government position to Luang Prabang which was overrun by two North Vietnamese companies early today, Laotian military sources said.

They said the North Vietnamese captured the position at the village of Ban Cho, about two miles northeast of the royal capital.

However, royal Lao army troops defending Luang Prabang later drove them out after several hours of heavy fighting.

Meanwhile in London, Laotian premier Prince Souvanna Phouma called for Britain and Russia to act urgently to remove the Communist-led military threat against Luang Prabang.

ECM Policies Spark Huge Farm Protest

BRUSSELS (AP) — About 60,000 farmers from the six Common Market countries marched into downtown Brussels with pitch forks waving today in a massive demonstration for higher prices and more aid.

A witness said one farmer was shot and wounded in the back by a policeman during an outbreak of violence along the march route.

The ministers are holding a three-day meeting on prices for the season beginning April 1. The ministers, recalling the cows brought into a recent session by protesting farmers, were meeting a mile and a half away — on the top floor of a 15-storey building!

Mansholt pleaded with the ministers for joint financing of his plan to modernize farming in the six countries. It would increase the size of farms and help small, inefficient farmers to leave the land. But Mansholt does not want to raise prices as high as the farmers would like.

ARMED FORCES SEIZE POWER

Argentine Head Ousted

By HAROLD SINNOTT

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — The armed forces seized power in a bloodless coup early today, ending a long-simmering dispute between military leaders and deposed President Roberto M. Levingston about the handling of labor disputes and general unrest in the country.

Another reason for the coup, The Associated Press said, was that the president wanted to put off elections for another four or five years.

Levingston, who took a harder line on the disputes than the military, will be replaced by a three-man junta, one member chosen from each of the services.

Levingston, 51, who was himself appointed by the armed forces, had been in power for only nine months. He took office last June after the armed forces ousted the regime of Juan Carlos Ongania.

Levingston, an army general, is the ninth Argentine president to be ousted by a military coup in the last 40 years. The country of 23 million has had six military coups and several unsuccessful revolts in 40 years.

The announcement that the military now plans to run the country itself was made by the army commander-in-chief, Gen. Alejandro A. Lanusse.

The commanders of the navy and air force joined with Lanusse in removing the president because Levingston Monday tried to get rid of the army chief, who was opposed to the president's nationalist policies.

The statement by the commanders struck observers here as reaffirming plans for a return to democratic rule, which ended in Argentina when Ongania took power.

LAST-STAND BID

The president made a last-stand bid to bolster his increasingly shaky position by firing Lanusse in a nationwide broadcast Monday night. He said Lanusse was derelict in his duty by failing to tighten security measures in the province of Cordoba, a hotbed of serious riots and anti-government demonstrations in the last 10 days.

In the auto industry centre, rioting led by workers and students opposed to the government's economic and social policies left several persons dead, dozens injured and property damage estimated at $3.2 million.

Within an hour of his broadcast, it became apparent that Levingston had miscalculated the strength of Lanusse.

Communists Gather

MOSCOW (UPI) — Delegations of more than 80 of the world's Communist parties are scheduled to arrive here by the end of the week to attend the 24th Soviet Party Congress, Communist sources said today. All the ruling parties will be represented except China and Albania.

RUSSIANS SET OFF SECOND N-BLAST

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — The Uppsala Seismologic Institution today reported the second underground nuclear blast in two days in the Soviet Union.

Prof. Marcus Baath, the head of the institution, said the explosion was recorded at 2 a.m. EST from the western slope of Ural Mountains and had a magnitude of 5.9 points on the open-ended Richter scale. The Uppsala institution reported another underground nuclear blast Monday from the Semipalatinsk area of Siberia.

New Irish PM To Smash Terror

BELFAST (CP) — Brian Faulkner, a veteran in-fighter in Northern Ireland's political and religious strife, took over as premier today and pledged to "smash terrorism."

The 50-year-old Faulkner regarded as a moderate—beat back the challenge of militant Protestant right-winger William Craig who wants to rearm the police and set up internment camps for suspected Irish Republican Army terrorists.

Faulkner, a skilful political manoeuvrer, promised the Protestant militants, who have accused British troops and reform advocates of being too soft on the IRA, that he would stamp out "not only terrorism and sabotage, but riots and disorder."

And he held out a pledge to the Roman Catholic minority that he would work for restoration of "confidence throughout the entire community." He said he did not want "harsh measures or repressive measures."

CAUCUS SHOWDOWN

The showdown in the two-man fight came in a caucus of the Protestant-based Unionist party.

Canada Can't Halt Pipeline, Says MP

TORONTO (CP) The United States will permit the construction of a trans-Alaska pipeline to carry Arctic oil to southern markets and "all the political pressure in Canada . . . isn't going to affect what the Americans do," Patrick Mahoney, Liberal MP for Calgary South, said Monday.

Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, said in an interview a Canadian pipeline will be built, but the Alaska line will come first.

"Ultimately the need for petroleum resources would outweigh the damage that might be done to the North Slope of Alaska and the west coast of Canada," he said.

Mr. Mahoney said a Canadian pipeline down the Mackenzie River would not solve the crude oil shortage in California and that is why the Americans will build the Alaska route.

A group of seven major oil companies favor the 800-mile Alaska line and a west coast tanker route to move oil to Washington state from Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's northern coast.

Representatives of the companies concerned are due to meet Energy Minister J. J. Greene and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien in Ottawa Wednesday when the two ministers are expected to urge the adoption of the proposed Mackenzie River route.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Maxwell James Thoms, 19, of La Scie, Nfld., was charged in magistrate's court today at Gander in connection with a threatening letter received by Premier Joseph Smallwood during the Quebec FLQ crisis last fall. Thoms was remanded in custody for eight days and ordered taken to St. John's for a psychiatric examination.

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia's new Liberal government opted for a deficit budget rather than increased taxes or a cut in programs because expenditures are outstripping revenues, Finance Minister Peter Nicholson said Monday.

Tax Evader Fined

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Allen Klein, former business manager of the Beatles, was fined $15,000 Monday for not filing income-tax reports for 10 employees. Federal Judge Morris Lasker imposed the fine and gave Klein until April 15, the filing date for 1970 income-tax returns, to make the payment. Failure to pay by that time could result in a prison term.

ORGANISMS RECREATED IN LABORATORY

Scientists Look at Mars Life Compounds

By STUART AUERBACH

WASHINGTON (WP) — Compounds that are necessary for the creation of life are probably being formed by sunlight on the surface of Mars, three scientists reported Monday.

These organic compounds were produced in a laboratory under conditions simulating the Martian surface and its bombardment of ultra violet rays from the sun.

While the compounds — formaldehyde, acetaldehyde and glycolic acid — are needed for life to exist, they are not enough by themselves to produce it.

"This is the most favorable indication for a possible Martian biological evolution that we have had in the last five years," said Dr. Norman O. Horowitz, one of the three scientists who worked on the experiments for the past year.

"There are still many uncertainties, however, which won't be resolved until we land on the planet in 1975."

The first unmanned landings on Mars are scheduled for 1975. However, two spacecraft will be launched in May to orbit the planet at close range for three months. They are scheduled to begin their orbits in November.

Horowitz, who has always been extremely cautious about the existence of any form of life on Mars, said the new findings increase the chance "from highly improbable to just improbable."

The chance that life exists on Mars had been dimmed by pictures and scientific instruments carried to within 2,000 miles of the surface of the red planet.

They showed a bleak, inhospitable surface and the absence of such vital elements for life as nitrogen.

They did, however, send back enough information about the surface of Mars, its atmosphere and the ultra-violet rays that bombard it to allow Dr. Horowitz and his colleagues, Drs. Jerry S. Hubbard and James P. Hardy, to build a model of the Martian surface.

The surface was made from either sterilized soil or crushed glass in a gas mixture of 97 per cent carbon dioxide, some carbon monoxide and water vapor.

CREATION UNEXPECTED

Horowitz said the unexpected creation of organic compounds was caused by the reaction of the simulated surface to the large amount of ultraviolet rays, previously believed to be incapable of producing such a reaction.

Formaldehyde and acetaldehyde are "important starting materials for the synthesis of a variety of organic compounds, including sugars," the three researchers said.

Horowitz said in a telephone interview that he believes the three organic compounds would react with ammonia if there is any on Mars — to produce amino acids, the building blocks of proteins.

Their findings were published in the March issue of the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Hepatitis Shot May Work Like Polio Vaccine

NEW YORK (Reuter)—Scientists have found a way to immunize people against serum hepatitis that may control the disease in the way the Salk vaccine virtually ended polio, it was announced today.

The New York University Medical Centre said it considered the work of Prof. Saul Krugman and two associates to be "a significant accomplishment toward the development of a vaccine for the control of the disease, much as poliomyelitis has been controlled by vaccines."

Hepatitis is a virus-caused disease, attacking the liver and causing jaundice, nausea, weakness and other symptoms.

Serum hepatitis is an inflammation of the liver caused by transfusion of contaminated blood or plasma and by the use of poorly sterilized hypodermic needles and other medical equipment. It can also be passed on by an infected person.

THERE'S ANOTHER KIND

It is distinguished from infectious hepatitis which is caused by contaminated food and water.

Prof. Krugman said recent observations by his team, which has been studying hepatitis since 1956, indicated that the boiling for one minute of serum made from the MS-2 (serum hepatitis) strain of virus destroyed the substance's ability to infect without affecting its ability to stimulate production of antibodies against the disease.

The scientist said his team had been successful in fighting the disease by both active immunization—the injection of a virus into a body which then produces antibodies—and passive immunization—the direct injection of antibodies.

Active immunization, he said was induced by the inoculation of a boiled preparation of MS-2 serum in distilled water.

Two inoculations were more effective than one but one inoculation gave enough protection to prevent some cases and modify others. Those receiving two injections of the boiled serum were not only protected against hepatitis but they also developed antibodies against the disease.

The studies were conducted with a comparatively small number of participants and further testing is necessary, he added.

was prepared to offer and because Brown wanted to continue as president of Home Oil after a sale.

The same reasons were the reported cause for the failure of earlier negotiations to find a private Canadian buyer for Brown's shares.

Home Oil is Canada's largest non-foreign owned oil company, with assets of about $250 million. Its sale to Ashland would have put nearly all the Canadian oil industry under American control.

At present, more than 80 per cent of the Canadian oil industry is foreign controlled, mostly by Americans, and foreigners control 99 per cent of the country's oil refining industry.

OFFERED $20 M

Although Home's assets are worth $250 million, only its limited "B" shares are voting stock. Cygnus Corp., a holding company controlled by Brown, also issued "A" and "B" stock, with only the "B" stock voting.

Brown currently owns 50.4 per cent of the Cygnus "B" stock and Cygnus holds 43.6 per cent of the Home "B" stock.

The actual market value of the controlling Cygnus shares is estimated at about $10 million, but Ashland reportedly had offered more than $20 million to Brown for the shares.

But Craig, while short on support in the caucus, claimed control of more than half the Unionist party's district branches, raising the prospect that he could be elected leader of the party at a convention scheduled Monday.

James Chichester-Clark quit as prime minister and party leader last weekend because the British government would not approve tougher measures against Roman Catholic extremists of the IRA.

Generally the prime minister also is elected party leader. But in this case there appeared to be a chance that different men would hold the two jobs.

Centennial Decoration Contest Set

A chance to brighten up Victoria for the royal visit and win a prize in the process has been offered merchants of the four central municipalities by Greater Victoria centennial '71 committee.

A contest for the best decorations in various categories of stores was authorized Monday by the centennial committee, which named director Alf Pettersen organizer.

Target of the competition is the week of April 25-30, with judging and awards to take place the last day.

City hall will be in full regalia by then, and on April 26 Mayor Courtney Haddock will run the ensign up the mast in Centennial Square to mark flag-raising day in B.C.

By May 3 when the Queen and members of the Royal Family arrive in the capital, Victoria is expected to be ablaze with colored bunting, flags, pennants and the usual glory of spring blossoms.

Overdue Boat Found Safe At Ganges

A boat reported overdue on a trip from Brentwood Bay to Ladner on the mainland was found at Ganges, Salt Spring Island, this morning, with all five of its occupants safe.

The operator of the 24-foot power cruiser Free Wind, Dennis Crane of Ladner, had ducked into Ganges for shelter from rough weather.

Also aboard the craft was Mrs. Rodstrom of the same address, two boys, aged six and seven, and Kelly Thompson, 11, of 4979 47th Ave. on the mainland.

None suffered any ill effects and at noon Crane was waiting for favorable weather to make the Strait crossing.

three years that a U.S. warplane had been hit by a SAM.

South Vietnamese forces were rapidly closing out their campaign. A spokesman said another 7,000 troops had withdrawn across the border, leaving 5,000 in Laos out of the peak force of 22,000.

RUN GAUNTLET

Associated Press correspondent Holger Jensen reported from an abandoned fire base near a border crossing point that remnants of one South Vietnamese armored column loaded with several hundred paratroops raced across the border today through a gauntlet of heavy North Vietnamese fire.

American mechanized units lined Highway 9 to protect the retreating South Vietnamese and prevent pursuing North Vietnamese tanks from crossing the border. Jensen said a fleet of U.S. helicopter gunships made continuous rocket and strafing runs on both sides of the bomb-cratered highway, while jet fighter-bombers struck North Vietnamese positions less than half a mile away.

A South Vietnamese armored column of 102 tanks, armored personnel carriers and trucks crossed into South Vietnam from Laos this morning after fighting its way for three days around a North Vietnamese roadblock.

NIXON PLEASED

The president said he would announce next month another troop withdrawal that would continue the U.S. pull out at least at the present rate of 12,500 men a month.

Nixon told a television audience in a live broadcast that the three major goals of the Laotian campaign had been achieved. He said these were to ensure continued American withdrawals from South Vietnam, give protection for troops remaining there, and provide proof that the South Vietnamese, man for man, could defend themselves.

In an hour-long interview Nixon spoke with high optimism about the progress of the war, the Laotian campaign, and the prospects for continued U.S. disengagement.

DISCOUNTS REPORTS

The president discounted the impact made by press reports and television film depicting the current South Vietnamese withdrawal as a disorderly rout.

He said they gave only a small part of the picture and did not show how well most of Saigon's troops had performed.

In Paris, however, North Vietnam rejected today Nixon's claims, and said the South Vietnamese incursion had failed completely.

"The criminal operation undertaken in southern Laos by the United States and the Saigon puppet administration for nearly two months has completely failed," the spokesman of Hanoi's Paris peace talks delegation said in a statement.

The spokesman said more than 10,000 Saigon troops and thousands of American soldiers and airmen had been put out of action in southern Laos and on the Khe Sanh front.

The South Vietnamese pullback has produced a welter of conflicting assessments outside the U.S. administration. But, as pieced together, the official assessment looks something like this:

GOAL DISRUPTED

The long-range goal of the operation was to make it impossible for the Communists to carry out a major offensive that allied intelligence showed they were planning for August, in time to disrupt the South Vietnamese presidential elections scheduled in the fall. A number of planned objectives were achieved, but the Communists reacted more fiercely than the U.S. planners had thought they would.

Intelligence estimates showed that there were only 1½ North Vietnamese divisions in the region of the South Vietnamese incursion. It was thought that those forces would fade away, as they did in Cambodia last year. Instead, the Communists threw in everything they could get together — a total of four divisions. They also had another surprise. The committed almost a third of the total North Vietnamese tank force.

The current view is that pressure on the rear of the Saigon forces will continue and Hanoi's armored and ground troops might try to continue their current push into South Vietnam.

Strong Earthquake on Norway Isle

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — A strong earthquake on the Norwegian island of Jan Mayen in the Arctic Ocean today measured 5.7 on the Richter scale, the Uppsala Seismological Institution reported.

Prof. Marcus Baath, director of the institute, said the quake on the sparsely populated island 640 miles east of Tromso was "uncommonly strong, considering the area concerned."

The University of California seismographic laboratory at Berkeley also reported the quake at 4:36 a.m. EST and measured it at 6.25 on the Richter scale. It placed the quake in the ocean between Jan Mayen and Spitsbergen, 600 miles northeast of the island. Spitsbergen, an archipelago 400 miles east of Norway, also belongs to Norway. It is not heavily populated.

A second strong quake, believed to have occurred in northwestern Iran, was recorded at 4:26 a.m. EST by the Central Institute for Meteorology and Geodynamics in Vienna. It measured 6.2 on the Richter scale.

Teachers' Bill Pushed Through Under Heavy Fire

Brothers Hedges On Explanations

For almost three hours, Education Minister Donald Brothers refused Monday to explain how teachers who break away from the B.C. Teachers' Federation will bargain with school boards.

Exasperated opposition members vainly tried to get the explanation which they said was needed to make sure that bargaining "chaos" won't result from a bill allowing teachers to drop out of the BCTF.

Brothers was called a "flop" and the "weakest" of all the Socreds in the house, and the bill was labelled retribution against the BCTF for its political action in the 1969 election campaign.

TIGHTENS GRIP

The bill, which tightens the cabinet's grip on educational policy, was passed at 11:05 p.m. with New Democrats and Liberals voting against it.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett tried repeatedly to get Brothers to say whether an individual teacher would be able to bargain with a school board on his own.

Brothers kept referring him to Section 137 of the Public Schools Act which says that a school district may negotiate with any association, incorporated or unincorporated, which represents teachers.

REMOVES POWER

Section 137 was amended by the government in 1965 to remove the power of school boards to negotiate with individual teachers.

After Premier Bennett had whispered some advice to him, Brothers told Barrett to "draw your own conclusions" about whether individuals could negotiate with school boards. He said it was a "problem" for local school boards to solve under Section 137.

Angrily, Barrett retorted:

"You haven't thought this legislation out at all . . . it is purely a political move against an organization."

PRIVILEGES

BROTHERS
. . . called flop

Brothers also ran into trouble when he tried to explain how he had learned that some teachers want out of the BCTF.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said he has a thick pile of mail from teachers opposed to an end to compulsory membership in the federation. And he challenged Brothers to show the house how many letters he had from teachers who want out.

Brothers finally said he has received about 20 evenly divided letters on the subject. But he added that "hundreds" of teachers told him they wanted out of the BCTF during his tour of B.C. school districts last year.

McGeer predicted chaos would result in bargaining over teachers' salaries unless the section of the bill eliminating voluntary membership is withdrawn.

He predicted splinter teachers' organizations would form and individual teachers also would bargain, further complicating already difficult bargaining problems.

TIE UP SYSTEM

McGeer said he wondered what the government would do if a group of radical teachers formed a new association and brought in a series of "brushfire strikes" to tie up the school system.

Government members scoffed at McGeer, but he said, "Anyone who can't see that one coming is blind."

Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) said McGeer was "creating a bogeyman that doesn't exist." Voluntary membership would put teachers in the same position as doctors who may or may not join the B.C. Medical Association.

Those who don't belong to the association have to accept the fee scale bargained for doctors by the BCMA.

NOT UNDERSTOOD

But the NDP said Wallace does not understand the bill. They said the difference between the doctors and the teachers is that the BCMA is the bargaining agent for doctors but the BCTF does not appear to be the sole bargaining agent for teachers under the proposed changes.

Dennis Cocke (NDP — New Westminster) bluntly termed the bill "John Birch Society legislation." He said the government introduced it to break the BCTF, and he wondered who would be next. Cocke predicted that more than 10 per cent of B.C.'s teachers will leave the federation.

NOT MUCH

Barrett later began a cross examination of Brothers, but did not get much from it.

He wanted to know how school boards had been advised to deal with the bill. Brothers said he had not talked with school boards about it.

"I'll give them (school boards) the same answer I gave to you. I'll refer them to Section 137 of the Public Schools Act."

Barrett asked what the BCTF should do if a school district announced it would not bargain with the federation any more. Brothers said nothing.

BAD CONTRACTS

Barrett also wanted to know how the act would prevent unemployed teachers from taking bad contracts just to get work. And he asked if Brothers had considered what effects this would have on teachers with families who cannot afford to have their salaries undercut by job-hungry individuals.

Brothers said nothing. But he adjourned debate on the bill at 5:45.

When the bill was called for debate at 9:30 in the evening, Barrett renewed his bitter attack on Brothers.

"For a minister piloting a bill through the house, your explanation is so poor and inadequate that one wonders whether it was your idea at all," Barrett said. "You're a poor excuse for a minister of education. You're a flop."

McGeer said Brothers' refusal to answer only adds to the bad relations the government has with teachers. He said the one-day walkout Friday over pensions was a moderate move. And he added that the "stubborn, stupid bureaucracy" behind this bill is going to increase teacher radicalism.

McGeer asked Brothers to resign.

"This minister has to be the weakest of all the Social Credit members," McGeer said.

"I object," said Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings, breaking up the house with laughter. McGeer then offered to withdraw the remark to give Skillings that distinction.

Hunter Vogel (SC — Langley) said he has met many teachers who object to what they feel is a lack of "professionality" in the teachers' federation. By making the organization have to work to hold its membership, more professional spirit might be developed, he said.

He referred to the federation's campaign during the last provincial election in which political candidates were urged to endorse the BCTF's education policies.

RETRIBUTION

Bill Hartley (NDP — Yale-Lillooet) said Vogel's remarks were evidence that the bill was brought in as retribution for the teachers' political action.

Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said the handing of major powers to the civil service was a "major, perhaps tragic step backwards."

HEARING AID WARNING

Act May Hike Prices

New Democrat and Liberal MLAs warned the government Monday that its Hearing-Aid Regulation Act could lead to restrictive advertising practices which prevent price competition.

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) said the hearing-aid dealers and consultants board proposed in the act will have the power to control advertising.

"This means that the dealers are going to have a combine and jack up prices, it's as simple as that," Macdonald said.

Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson said that won't happen, because laymen will be on the board. She said the intention of the advertising section of the bill is to prevent misleading information about hearing aids, not to end competition.

But Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) said Dawson's answer is no guarantee that the board will not restrict price advertising as has happened with pharmacists.

Then Macdonald said that false advertising can be prosecuted under federal legislation or another section of the act.

And Allan Williams (L — West Vancouevr-Howe Sound) said another weakness in the bill is that the section regulating licensing of hearing-aid dealers does not demand that they be qualified to dispense every service listed in the act.

GOVERNMENT BUYING BAY WAREHOUSE

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant confirmed Monday that the provincial government is purchasing The Bay warehouse on Cloverdale Avenue for use as a storage centre.

Chant said equipment and materials from a number of government departments would be moved to the two-acre warehouse before June 1.

The move would mean that leases on a number of rented storage facilities will be allowed to lapse in the future, he said.

It will also ease overcrowding in some buildings in the vicinity of the Legislative Building, he said.

Milk Price Increase Hinted by Committee

The possibility of a milk price increase to help keep Lower Mainland farmers in business was raised in the legislative agriculture committee Monday.

G. J. Okulitch, general manager of the Fraser Valley Milk Producers' Association, said the co-operative's fluid milk plants in the Lower Mainland have operated at a loss for the past couple of months.

Dairy farmers on Vancouver Island are in a better position because a higher proportion of their milk is sold in the higher-priced fluid state, Okulitch said. The Fraser Valley co-operative's breakdown is 65 per cent fluid and 35 per cent in other products.

'DANGER POINT'

Okulitch said he doesn't want to see any more farmers knocked out of production because the "danger point" will soon be reached in Lower Mainland production.

He said he hoped the situation would improve soon for farmers.

Regardless of how beautiful, reliable or well we build the Coupe, some people will always think of it as a toy just because it's small and imported. (Having a name like Toyota doesn't help.) In spite of the fact that the Coupe has a top speed of 105 mph and can leave a lot of big cars standing at the stoplight. There's still a hard core group of big car people who refuse to take us seriously.

We tried to gain their respect with our new big engine that runs so quietly, you hardly know it's there. With our power-assisted front disc brakes and our optional automatic transmission.

It didn't work. (No self respecting big car gets over 30 miles per gallon.)

We even tried to fool them into thinking we were a big car.

But it's no use, our price is a dead give-away. The Coupe sells for only $2299*—with everything.

So now we've given up. All we can say is, if you think imported cars are toys, stop by your nearest Toyota dealer and wind up our new Corolla Coupe.

Spanner in the Works

BALANCING OFF THE INspired optimism of official United States and South Vietnamese communiques and the probably disillusioned reports of American helicopter pilots, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that the six-week drive into Laos has failed. The Ho Chi Minh trail undoubtedly was reached and cut, but the invading force was apparently not strong enough to withstand concentrated and very heavily armed Northern assaults. The trail sites had to be abandoned and what had begun as a withdrawal appears to have taken on the proportions of a precipitate retreat.

Even with sustained United States air support the South Vietnamese seem to have been outmanoeuvred and out-gunned. More than half of the troops are reported to have regained the South Vietnamese border and the rest are making their way towards it. The announced South Vietnamese casualties—more than 1,000 killed, nearly 4,000 wounded—total about one-quarter of the initial force.

The results of this crushing setback — for even though the Northern supply line was cut in places there is no evidence that it was not quickly restored and that alternative routes were not still available — will be far-reaching. Militarily, the South Vietnamese have failed to show that they can handle the Northern forces in massive confrontations, even with American air power. And psychologically, a campaign which might have given the Southern troops a fine boost in morale if successful — and produced a corresponding depression among Northern troops — has undoubtedly had the opposite effects.

The main reason given by President Nixon for the whole Laotian attack — that it would stall Northern operations by cutting off their supplies for an extended period, and so aid the continued withdrawal of United States ground forces — is likewise in serious question. What must now be determined is whether the South Vietnamese forces can successfully take over the defence system from the Americans, and whether the United States withdrawal program can therefore proceed as planned. At this point the answer could be negative in each case despite Mr. Nixon's optimistic statement yesterday.

President Nixon cannot tolerate any hitch in the scheduled repatriation of American ground forces. He has publicly referred so many times to his promise to effect this that it would be almost impossible for him to delay his plan — even for a serious breakdown in the South Vietnamese military organization. The danger, therefore, is that he may feel himself forced into some desperate adventure, even invasion of the North, in an effort to maintain his promised timetable.

President Nixon's political future hinges on his success in winding up the Vietnam war, and thus depends on the viability of the South Vietnamese government and military power. As of today, they are not exactly Gibraltars on which he can count. But he is not the sort of politician who will easily give up what he has won.

Problems of the Second Stations

SKEPTICISM ABOUT THE ROLE of TV stations and a second network in competition with the CBC is not new. Doubts regarding the standards of programming in the private CTV network were voiced in the Fowler Committee Report of 1965 which remarked, on the subject of quality maintenance, that the private members "have not shown themselves competent or responsible to discharge this responsibility."

Further doubt, this time regarding the ability of CTV to extend "second service" beyond its basic network, was made plain by the president and managing director of CTV, Mr. Murray Chercover, when speaking before the Davey Committee on Mass Media last April: "We developed, within our structure, a procedure whereby we could indeed extend and provide coverage even though it is well known throughout the industry that there is no economic advantage, or indeed economic reality, in extending beyond our backbone network as it is currently structured."

Attempts by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to improve programming, greater Canadian content and the extension of a second television service have thus, not unexpectedly, brought financial strain to the private network. The CRTC has, however, proved sympathetic to CTV's problems and Mr. Pierre Juneau, CRTC's chairman, has announced that both his commission and CTV have resorted to outside studies to get a clearer picture of the CTV structure.

Unlike other networks CTV is a co-operative owned by member stations. In the past the CTV system has seen frequent adjustments "in the formulae and sharing arrangements which are part of the affiliation agreements," to use Mr. Chercover's words. It can be supposed that there have been too many separate interests to serve in financing, ownership and programming, and that the various adjustments to satisfy members have made it difficult to establish the roles of the member stations in the community and the nation.

CTV's role remains as much in doubt in 1971 as it was when it began broadcasting as a network in 1961. Mr. Juneau's sympathetic approach implies that CTV should receive national support. But there is much that should yet be clarified.

Technology on the Fire Front

AN AD HOC CONGRESSIONAL committee is asking the United States House Appropriations Committee for $10 millions to start a new battle that should win wide support. The committee wants to wage war against forest fires and to bring to the attack modern technology to replace fire-fighting methods that, it says, have changed little in the last 25 years.

Involved in the proposal is the use of modern, highly sophisticated military aircraft and equipment capable of night operations, flying through smoke and high winds and using infra-red sensors to seek out hot spots, as well as precision bombing devices to drop fire retardants quickly, massively and accurately on target.

A pilot project in California could be initiated for $10 millions, according to the committee, but its potential efficiency could save many times that amount in dousing fires before they caused extensive loss in forests and rangeland. In British Columbia substantial use is made of aircraft for quick attacks on fires in remote areas, frequently catching them before they spread out of control.

The proposed American experiment would bring a constructive use to inventions devised primarily for purposes of a destructive nature. On the face of it, the project looks like a good investment — one in which British Columbia might profitably interest itself.

". . . as no demonstrations have been planned for next week, we would welcome suggestions as to what we can protest about . . ."

FROM NEW YORK — By JAMES RESTON

No Immediate Chinese Lunge Into War

VERY little reliable information trickles out of China these days, but two recent morsels are interesting. First, Chinese officials in Peking have been talking more freely and ominously to Western diplomats about the dangers of the Indochina war, and second, they have been emphasizing that, while they intervened in the Korean war, they withdrew all their troops from that country once the danger was over. These diplomatic reports do not indicate that China is about to intervene in the Vietnam war. They state flatly that they have no evidence of unusual military activity in the southern provinces of China, and at least one report says that Peking has actually withdrawn some "transportation troops" from North Vietnam and northern Laos in recent months.

Reston

Also, as the South Vietnamese invasion of Laos has run into stubborn opposition from the North Vietnamese along the Ho Chi Minh supply trails, the officials in Peking have been expressing confidence that Hanoi and the Viet Cong can contain the invasion without unacceptable losses or undue risk to the Hanoi regime.

Reassuring Hanoi

What the Chinese are implying, however, either for psychological or military reasons, is that they will enter the war rather than watch the defeat of North Vietnam, and they are adding, probably to reassure Hanoi, that if they do come in to keep the North Vietnamese from being overrun, they will get out again, as they did in Korea.

Officials in Washington regard these vague threats and promises more as propaganda and psychological warfare than anything else, but while they insist that they have interrupted the flow of supplies from North Vietnam to the South, and gained time for the withdrawal of U.S. troops in the process, they also concede privately that both China and the Soviet Union will undoubtedly increase the flow, and maybe even the nature, of military supplies to Hanoi for the second round in the Laotian battle next autumn and spring.

Peking and Moscow seem to have renewed their ideological propaganda war against one another in recent days, but both are still co-operating with Hanoi for their own reasons.

They have a common aim of not allowing the United States to demonstrate its military capacity to defeat a Communist country almost 10,000 miles from Washington. Beyond this, Peking clearly does not want to see U.S. air and naval bases established close to its frontiers on the Indochina Peninsula and Moscow has a more cynical reason for wanting the war to go on about as before.

For while the Soviet Union is paying most of the cost of supplying North Vietnam with weapons, and does not want to risk a war with the U.S. over Indochina, it cannot be too unhappy about a conflict that keeps China preoccupied and the U.S. divided.

Accordingly, Moscow and Peking will probably keep on supplying Hanoi through the next few months of the rainy season so as to be ready for the next attempt to cut the Ho Chi Minh supply routes, and this is precisely the flaw in the Administration's strategy of invading Laos.

For even the Pentagon does not claim that its "incursion" into Laos has in any way been decisive, and even if it managed to cut all the trails from Hanoi, there are always the trains from China and the air and seaways from the Soviet Union.

This has always been one of the mysteries of the U.S. strategy in Indochina. It has seemed to rest on the assumption that somehow China and the Soviet Union would not react to the offensive strikes of Saigon and Washington, whereas all the evidence is on the other side; namely, that Peking and Moscow will take all of the measured counter-action necessary to maintain the balance of power in Indochina, with full confidence that China and Russia, and not North Vietnam are the major arsenals of Communism, and that Washington cannot block the flow of supplies without attacking Soviet or Chinese supply routes and risking a major war.

The diplomatic reports from Peking, which are supported by similar reports on Chou En-lai's recent visit to Hanoi, do not, therefore, indicate an immediate crisis with China, but merely illustrate the long-range dilemma of the Nixon Administration.

If Washington fails to stop the flow of arms through Laos, as seems to be the case in the recent invasion of that country, then it must be prepared to risk another invasion later on. And if, one day, it does manage to cripple Hanoi and cut off Hanoi's supplies, then it must face the very real possibility of Chinese intervention.

This is precisely what happened in Korea. General MacArthur was not in trouble until he got behind the North Koreans with the brilliant Inchon landing, and then, just when success seemed in sight, Peking moved. What the latest information suggests is that much the same scenario might unfold if, but only if, the Pentagon successes ver begin to match its propaganda.

FROM CALGARY — By JAMES H. GRAY

A Housing Boom Comes Tumbling Down

FOR almost 40 years a beefed-up housing construction program has been the prime panacea to which governments have turned in times of economic distress. In the current crisis, one of the loudest calls had come from people urging removal of the sales tax on building materials in order to revive the house-building industry. In this context let's take a look at some of the contradictory trends in the house-building business in Calgary.

Gray

Eighteen months ago housing congestion was so great that the Calgary welfare department was quartering its clients in hotels and motels at rents up to $300 a month. Today, while the welfare rolls have doubled, landlords are clamoring for welfare tenants.

There is a large bulletin board in the welfare office which was once used for notices of furniture and clothing, etc., for sale. Today it is plastered with offers of housing accommodation.

Much of this change is attributed to the impact of the federal emergency housing program launched last year. Calgary got into both the limited dividend and the subsidized projects with both feet and better than 2,000 units were built. Scarcity became a surplus and Marshall's theory of marginal utility came into play with a vengeance. Rent gouging by landlords went out completely.

Unwanted Vacancies

Now there are unwanted vacancies in both types of government housing. And these developed just when a whopping surplus was developing in the high-rise apartments going up everywhere. At the end of February there were over 1,000 vacancies in apartments and over 500 single-family units were without tenants.

In recent weeks newspaper classified columns have been filling up with houses-for-sale offers. At a rough guess, twice as many Calgary home-owners are trying to sell this year as there were last year. There are now two full pages of vacant apartments being advertised with a couple of columns a year ago.

The houses-for-sale glut at this time probably ends a trend that many Calgarians had assumed would go on forever. They bought a house with a minimum down payment, lived in it for a year, put in a lawn and back fence and sold it for a $2,000 profit. They put the profit into a larger and more expensive place and repeated the process.

Now the direction has changed. The urge now is to get into lower-payments housing and out of high carrying charges. Or, for the higher salaries unemployed, it is a desperate effort to salvage something from the ruins. All this means selling at a loss instead of at a profit, at a time when the seller has a 12 per cent mortgage and money is becoming available at 10 per cent.

So at a time when the house-building industry is in deep trouble, how are things on the labor front? The electricians' union has just signed an agreement for a 20 per cent increase over two years and a 35-hour work week. The present electricians' rate is $5.50 an hour. The carpenters are going after 25 per cent on their present rate of $4.55 an hour.

Anybody who does build a house in 1971 will thus be faced with a big increase in labor costs. That will include the Alberta government which has just announced a plan so to subsidize low-cost housing that people at the $5,000-income level will be able to buy homes. At present rates, nobody under the $9,000 level can qualify for a mortgage big enough to get any kind of a house built.

At this point some comparisons are in order with conditions which prevailed in Calgary 20 years ago when the now-expiring boom was just getting under way. The union scale for carpenters and electricians then was $1.75 an hour. It was mainly an on-paper scale. The house-building industry was in the hands of private builders who seldom paid the union rate. Today it is in the hands of the big project builders who have to pay the scale.

In 20 years wages in the construction industry have tripled in Calgary. The cost of short-term money that keeps the contractors in business has doubled. Yet at the same time there has been an actual reduction in the cost of much of the material which goes into houses.

Cheaper Plywood

Fir plywood sheathing that sold for $4.48 a sheet in 1951 costs $3.80 today. There was a severe cement shortage then and the imported stuff sold for $2. to $2.20 for an 87½-lb. bag. The price today is $1.60 per 100 pounds.

Rockwool insulation, shiplap, and cedar siding are all lower in price and asbestos roofing is down by a third from 1951. Many of the plumbing fixtures have dropped in price, furnaces are much lower. So are many of the power tools which were just coming into general usage in 1951.

So the Calgary situation summarizes like this: There is enough housing accommodation of all types now available to fill the needs of the town for at least a year. There is a huge surplus of construction labor unemployed. Wage rates are being pushed through historic highs. And despite the housing surplus, rents are being held steadily at last year's figure for all the newer accommodation.

Looking Back

From the Times of March 23, 1911:

With over a quarter of a million dollars worth of elegant automobiles assembled under the roof of the drill hall, and representing the exhibits of the members of the Victoria Automobile Dealers' Association, the first automobile show for Victoria will be opened tonight by His Honor Lieut.-Governor Paterson. The automobile show is held under the auspices of the Victoria branch of the British and Foreign Seamen's Institute.

Caravan Critic

Victorians are currently offered the dubious privilege of being the first unsuspecting British Columbians to view the Centennial '71 Caravan. Any reality of the province's history is lost in the midway quality of the exhibition. The lone historic object on display is a printing press from St. Ann's Academy; the rest is plastic and plywood of a later age.

Fibreglass trees bear crepe paper foliage showing no resemblance to any known indigenous flora. The "minerals" displayed bear no similarity to those exhibited in the hallways outside the Provincial Department of Mines offices.

The First Citizens of this province can only be insulted that their 10,000-year-old history in what is now British Columbia is represented by a pig-tailed, turkey-feathered, buckskin-clad mannequin chopping away at an upright papier-mache totem pole with a tool no Indian carver ever handled. The only parts of the display showing any accuracy are the illuminated photographs but here again are second-hand offerings. The bilingual labels on them indicate they were pirated from the B.C. Expo 67 pavilion.

This is a vulgar, shoddy, imitation interpretation of the vibrant history of this province. The intelligent viewer need only to compare the technique he sees here with displays in local department store windows to realize that he has been duped. The Centennial Committee should recognize and admit their failure and withdraw this inaccurate piece of gimerackery before an entire province is insulted. — Disillusioned.

Two-way Interpretation

I am wondering who can explain to me the difference between deliberately falsifying an income-tax return or a claim for welfare or unemployment insurance and issuing bad cheques or using an unauthorized credit card for the purchase of goods at a store or money from a bank.

In the first cases invariably a fine is imposed although the sum in question may be very large and the person making the false statement is invariably a man of education and wealth who knowingly and willfully makes the false return whereas in most cases the second crimes are committed by not so well educated or wealthy persons. In the latter cases the person is very often sent to jail and not given the choice of paying a fine.

This two-way interpretation of the law has always been a source of puzzlement to me. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar.

High-Handed

Like many others I am appalled at the high-handed attitude of the directors of Victoria Theatre Guild in denying the use of their theatre to Jerry Gosley's Smile Show after 15 years occupancy.

Since last year they accepted taxpayers' money through a grant of $1400 — from the B.C. Cultural Fund — they should feel more obligated to the public than ever. This year they apparently prefer to see their theatre empty rather than collect $1339 (I verified this) rent as paid by the Smile Show last year. — Grant Shepherd, 2349 Millstream.

The New Chile: More Robin Hood Than Marx-Lenin

By GLEN ALLEN

(Allen is a former Victoria Times reporter who is now living in Chile.)

SANTIAGO — The book the Chilean middle class is taking away to the beach these late summer weekends is called An Introduction to Marxist Economic Theory by Ernest Mandel.

It is the number three best-seller here—among others are Love Story and The Love Machine — and its popularity isn't hard to figure.

People who have something to lose want to know what to expect from their new Unidad Popular government, a broad coalition of Communists, socialists and four other groups and the first freely elected Marxist-oriented government on this side of the world. People want to know how long they can afford those weekends in the sun.

'A crime against nature not to be comfortable'

Chile is four months into a new political order that so far has more of the flavor of Robin Hood than Lenin to it.

The rich of course don't like it because they feel threatened by the new regime and because of the pre-eminence in the government of the Communist party, probably the best-organized most efficient political group in Chile.

"What we want to know," a worried plastics manufacturer told this reporter, "is what kind of mail are they getting from Russia? Is it going to be another Russia here?"

President Salvador Allende says no. But it is his dream that everyone in Chile, including the nearly 50 per cent of the population that lives on less than $40 a month, should have enough to eat, a place to sleep, a job and some of the comforts only the few have now.

And Chile, especially in this faultless southern hemisphere summer, is one place in the world where it is a crime against nature not to be comfortable.

Chile is a kind of California without pain.

In its 3,000 miles of coast are beaches that haven't yet been found and behind the beaches are mountains with ski trails that haven't yet been skiied. The south is a huge bowl of green, fertile farmland. The far south is a lakeland with the postcard prettiness of British Columbia. The north is a vast, mysterious but somehow hospitable desert.

Bold political slogans are splashed on every fence and wall in Santiago, a languorous city of 3,000,000 that is beautiful but, only in places, as if it were a hybrid of Hamilton and Paris.

Yet, there is little outward evidence of the typical Latin American political turmoils. No night police raids,

State begins takeover of 24 private banks

no street searches, no interrogations at the border by men dressed in comic opera uniforms. Here even the policemen smile from time to time and are, say the girls, terrible flirts.

But all Latin America is watching Chile and asking: Has Salvador Allende started something? The changes are undeniable.

So far the government has expropriated one-quarter as many big "fundos" (farm estates) as the previous government took over in all its six years. It is redistributing them to landless peasants and, in some cases, turning them into collective farms.

The government has introduced a bill, almost certain to be passed within two months, which will make the huge copper industry, producing 80 per cent of Chile's exports, totally Chilean. And it has served notice on other foreign controlled enterprises ranging from steel mills to the American telephone company that the state will soon be their majority shareholder.

The government has raised wages — in at least one case as much as 65 per cent — and frozen prices of milk, bread and some 300 other commodities. It has told merchants to reduce their mark-up in retail prices from 40 to 30 per cent over wholesale prices.

The state has begun to take over 24 private banks in the country and at present owns a majority of the shares of three of them. The government claims that previously banks had given credit only to the rich and the politically influential. The state has tied the exchange rate of the national monetary unit, the escudo, at 14 to the U.S. dollar (though the black market this week is offering 32 escudos to the dollar).

The government has recognized North Korea, North Viet Nam, China and will soon have consular relations with East Germany.

It has promised peasants and factory workers a real say in land reform, and the running of industry.

Allende says these measures are just a beginning. His government has raised the expectations of nearly everyone in Chile with expectations to be raised.

'The two sides are talking two different languages'

The poor, and the poor here as in most of Latin America are strikingly poor as the wealthy are insolently wealthy, want good homes, and good food.

Chilean businessmen and Allende's critics say that people's expectations are too high—that some of their expectations are unreasonable.

They say that before the year is out the economy will be in a disastrous position and that Chile's once well-organized society is being torn apart.

They point out that unemployment has risen from 5 to 8 per cent and that construction is at a standstill. Business, they say, is just recovering from a 50 per cent slump in sales after the elections. People aren't saving money and there is little important investment being made. Some 20,000 people fled the country after Allende's victory, taking an estimated $100 million with them. (So many left, so quickly, that one wag put up a sign at Santiago's Pudahuel airport: "Would the last one to leave please turn out the lights?")

The average work week is down from 44 hours to 42 hours a week, according to economic critic Jose Musalem of the Christian Democrats, and industries are delaying expansion until they see "what happens."

If Chileans who have money in the bank are frightened by the first four months of the Allende government, they are a little more sure of their new president. While he is by no means a legendary figure—what is generally known about his personal life can be written in a few paragraphs—he is a known quantity.

He has always said what he would do if he were made president, says Julio Chamorro, president of a 10,000 member Santiago businessmen's organization, "and now he is doing it. You can't fault a man for that."

It becomes increasingly clear that the two sides in Chile—conservative and socialist—are really talking two different languages. Allende and the Unidad Popular are not talking about conventional solutions to conventional economic problems, they are talking about radical change. They are talking about making life livable for people such as Rodendo Bravo and Jorge Gutierrez.

Rodendo Bravo, a 50-year-old "campesino" (peasant or farm-worker) lives on a large estate southwest of Santiago near the town of Talagante. He has worked for farmers all his life and he makes 14 escudos (98 cents at the official rate) per day plus a free small house and plot of land to grow vegetables of his own.

He spends nearly half his salary sending four of his eight children to school by private bus. There is no telephone and no medical service on the farm and when one of the 20 workers falls ill he has to send a friend for a taxi to take him to the clinic—a ride that costs two days' pay.

Jorge Gutierriez, a construction worker, is one of the nearly half-million people who live in substandard housing on the outskirts of Santiago in what are called "callampas"—collections of one-room affairs of boards and sheet metal that a Canadian farmer wouldn't keep his chickens in.

One of his three daughters caught typhoid this year after drinking from a canal. There was no drinking water in his district for a period of six months. He hasn't had a job for four months. When he works he figures he is lucky to make four or five escudos (40 cents) a day. There is no question of eating meat or fish, or going to the movies or leaving town.

Allende's so far quiet revolution may be important to all of Latin America, even if the president himself protests he has no intention of exporting his ideas.

Two hundred million of Latin America's 275 million people like Rodendo Bravo and Jorge Gutierriez live with difficulty. Hungry, unemployed, in trouble with the law, diseased, they spend their days fighting for a piece of bread, ripe for radical political solutions to help ease their desperation.

The Dark Side Of White Rhodesia

By COLIN SMITH

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — When Amber, the Portuguese stripper, starts her act at a Salisbury night club you cannot get a drink because the boss will not let the African waiters in lest the sight of so much white woman be too much for them.

Actually, Amber's performance, with its firm attachment to what looked like two silver stars and a matching tassel, would probably make the more abandoned artistes of Soho and Las Vegas wonder why she bothered.

Appi Olivier, a Jewish businessman from Johannesburg and Amber's friend and manager, says that Salisbury is two years behind. Two years behind where? "Johannesburg", said Appi, who should know about these things because he started the first psychedelic night club in South Africa — a worthy first when one considers that the Republic's censors recently ordered women's tights with a leggy picture on the packet to be sold under a plain plastic wrapper.

●

Personally, I would say that Appi's estimate of two years behind was fairly generous. I have never heard a hip-looking club pianist break into the Dam Buster's March before — especially when you have just requested a Ray Charles number.

But to be fair, the existence of European nightlife at all in Salisbury is a bit of a phenomenon in a colony whose white population is only 230,000, of whom 95,000 actually live in the Salisbury area. There are three European night clubs and several African and Coloured (mixed-race) establishments. Europeans can dance till dawn in an African or Coloured club but admission to their own nightspots is restricted to whites only. This has caused considerable resentment and Rhodesian youths visiting the Coloured clubs in search of girls rarely go alone.

There is also a "vice" mile in the city centred around the cheaper hotels where pretty teenage Coloured girls, usually high on dagga (cannabis) and shabeen beer, compete for curb-crawling whites at ridiculously low prices.

A British priest, Father John Gough, a droll 43-year-old Lancastrian from St. Helens who does a lot of welfare work among young people in the city, told me that the huge increase in prostitution was the outcome of a chronic job shortage for young Coloureds, partly brought about by the increase in artisan class immigrants from Britian who have replaced Coloureds in offices and shops. It has become a fairly well-organised vice racket.

●

A few weeks ago he had to break down the door of a prostitute's flat after she had telephoned him to say she had taken a full bottle of pills. He managed to get her to hospital in time for a stomach pump to save her. "She was just like a china doll when we found her: looked more white than Coloured." Afterwards, Father Gough told his bishop that he had seen a fearful thing that morning — a priest breaking into a brothel.

Down Drain

A fantastic interest in useless hobbies is one of the ingredients of the British character, according to Tim Mathews in a BBC Woman's Hour talk.

He gives his prize to a gentleman who collected and carefully analysed sink noises. His recording of a basin in a top floor bedroom of a leading Bristol hotel is described: 'Starting off in fine control, the final climax and deep-throated gurgle is typical of fifth-floor plumbing, with long drop-down pipe.'

Let's Be Proud of Our Hate

By RUSSELL BAKER

Here is the roster of new militant groups that have been formed in the past week:

Lout Liberation — This is a movement aimed at restoring freedom of self-expression to America's louts, who have for years been ruthlessly silenced and psychically mutilated by etiquette codes and misdemeanor status imposed upon society by the so-called "polite establishment" for imperialistic and genocidal reasons. The form of greeting used by Lout Libbers is a kick to the shins of the person being hailed. To attract public attention to their cause, Lout Lib members attend dinner parties and tell guests at the far end of the table that they ought to keep their mouths shut if they do not know what they are talking about. At the end of the evening they tell their hostess that the meal was miserable and that she ought to get a new girdle.

Grouch Now! — Grouch Now! is a highly disciplined group of militants determined to wipe out the last traces of pleasantness in the American public place. Laughter, smiles and other repressive behavior signifying good spirits degrade the dignity of grouchhood and should not be allowed to go unanswered, according to the Misanthrope's Manifesto, which calls for mass snarl-ins at the Washington Monument to dramatize the movement's demand for government-subsidized bellyaches.

Free Our Necks — This is an extremely violent rump faction of RAMFAST (Radicals and Militants for a Skinnier Tie). RAMFAST, it will be recalled, demands legislation requiring persons who wear fat neckties to sign an affidvait admitting that their intent is to intimidate and destroy the manhood of men who wear thin neckties. Free Our Necks, in a broadside published this week, declares that RAMFAST'S leaders are tools of the pig fat-necktie capitalists. It calls for dynamiting haberdasheries in order "to free the oppressed American neck from the genocidal chauvinism of fat neckties."

* * *

Hate! — The oppressive character of the American system, say the founders of Hate!, has created a coercive psychology which makes Americans feel ashamed of their hate except when they are hating people who do not love up to national love norms. Americans can never be free, Hate! contends, until every individual is granted the opportunity to hate for the pure joy of hating without being made to feel ugly and dirty. "Nothing people do together can really be dirty," Hate! says. "Let's learn to be proud of our hate."

Scholars for a Simpler Society — Complexity, which has been built into American life by men, warmongers and the mating instinct, among other factors, has viciously destroyed the simplicity of life in this country today, S.S.S. declared at its founding convention last week. This complexity has been imposed on America by oppressors to enslave and exploit the simple people for reasons too complex for anybody to understand. S.S.S. calls for the immediate restoration of simplicity to American life, by destroying everything now standing if necessary, but men, warmongers and the mating instinct without fail.

Sadist's Liberation — No group in America is more maligned and abused than our sadists. Such is the obloquy to which they are subjected that they rarely dare wear their whips, hat pins and tire chains in public for fear of receiving looks of alarm from so-called "straight" persons. Sadist's Lib has scheduled a mass beating in Chicago next month to dramatize its demand for changes in ancient repressive laws. For one demand, Sadist's Lib wants repeal of laws against torture on street corners when performed among consenting adults.

* * *

The Movement for a More Meaningful Movement — This group is composed of persons who feel that they have been oppressed and deprived of their right to a significant radical militant movement they can fight for. The oppressors, they say, are all the other radical militant movements, the goals of which, they say, are unmeaningful. All the other radical, militant movements, they say, have been created by the system as part of the oppressors' scheme to divert the attention of exploited people from the fact that the only movement that can possibly be meaningful for mankind has still not been formed. The Movement for a More Meaningful Movement wants to find out what this movement is, and form it.

But first, it declares, all the other movements, as well as the country, must be destroyed.

Calley Jurymen Having a Ball With Bourbon, TV—Lawyer

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Lieut. William Calley's defence lawyer complained bitterly that his client's murder-trial jury is "conducting business as usual" and dragging out their deliberations, in the seventh day today.

"If they're watching the Glen Campbell and Ed Sullivan shows and wining and dining themselves, I think that's a disgrace," George Latimer told the trial judge.

His complaint was prompted by newspaper reports that the six officers on the jury had requested a week's supply of fresh laundry and that arrangements be made for their pay cheques, due March 31.

Latimer's outrage was prompted by a story in the Atlanta Constitution saying the jurors spent Sunday night after a half-day session in court, watching those television shows and "before going to bed, two had beer, two sipped bourbon and one had scotch."

Latimer told the judge: "This is not a siesta. This is serious business. We have a man's life at stake."

But Judge Reid Kennedy said: "When you're talking about drinking there is a difference between having a cocktail and getting drunk."

The judge said he will not set hours for the jury because "I would rather see the verdict in this case be a well thought-out verdict."

Latimer protested about the reports that are getting to the large group of reporters about the jury's activities—such as sending out Monday for a case of beer.

The trial judge said he thought Latimer's complaints about the jury's relaxing after court were ill-founded, saying: "They have to get haircuts; they have to eat."

When he turned the four months of testimony over to the jury one week ago today, the judge told the six officers they could set their own hours and not to get over-tired.

He limited, however, to the hours of 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. any business which requires court personnel.

In the first six days, the jury spent some 34 hours actually deliberating and many other hours in the courtroom listening to taped testimony from 10 key prosecution witnesses.

The jury is deciding the guilt or innocence of the 27-year-old defendant who is charged with the premeditated murder of at least 102 villagers when his infantry platoon stormed My Lai March 16, 1968.

NEWLY APPOINTED regional director of Indian-Eskimo Affairs for British Columbia and the Yukon, is Lawrence E. Wight, 49, of Victoria and Ottawa. His headquarters will be in Vancouver. Wight replaces F. A. Clark, recently named regional director of Indian-Eskimo Affairs in Regina, Saskatchewan. Wight, a graduate of University of British Columbia, was formerly assistant director of accommodation planning with the department of public works in Ottawa.

KEATE OPPOSES BOARD

Press Reprisal Warning

Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate said Monday he is opposed to the setting up of a press ownership review board because "the government and the pres must always operate at arm's lentgh."

Keate, speaking to the University of Victoria Extension Association, said it has always been the duty of the press to scrutinize governments, and, where necessary, criticize.

"The possibilities of reprisal from a government with such wide powers must be obvious. If, on the other hand, as is entirely possible, a group were to benefit from a government-approved sale or merger, the thorny question arises: can any independent newspaper afford to accept favors from politicians? I think not."

The press ownership review board was a major proposal of the Davy Commission on the mass media.

Keate said the takeover of independent newspapers by the five major Canadian chains is "a pity."

"But it's a harsh fact of life, in many Canadian businesses today that the big grow bigger and in practical terms I cannot foresee the end of this process."

Keate supported another Davy Commission proposal for a national press council because it would "provide a check, even an unspoken one, on the excesses of the press, and at least the public would have another safety-valve on which it could record its displeasure with shoddy performance."

Frost, Belafonte Part of Show

TORONTO (CP) — The O'Keefe Centre has announced a spring program schedule including David Frost, Harry Belafonte, and the latest revival of Hello, Dolly!

TV star Frost will star in a variety show featuring singer Barbara McNair, Pearl Bailey and Cab Calloway star in the Hello, Dolly! production.

Other attractions include Les Grands Ballet Canadiens' rock opera, Tommy, the National Ballet of Canada, and Peter Brooks' Midsummer Night's Dream.

Glittering Symphony End Provided by Bach Arias

By AUDREY JOHNSON

In the case of the Bach Aria Group, last of the season's special attractions sponsored by Victoria Symphony Society, it surely must be acclaimed first among all the fine music that has been provided under these auspices.

Superlative music performed by nine distinguished artists in a mood of sublimation is a rare and surpassing experience.

ALL MASTERS

Each of the four vocalists and five instrumentalists was clearly a thorough master of his particular instrument, using it with that fluent ease that gives vent to the most complete artistic expression.

And yet the ensemble balance was never for a fleeting moment disturbed by the weight of individualism.

The program in fact, prepared under the direction of William H. Scheide, gave scope to solo as well as ensemble performance.

The concert began superbly with the opening of Johann Sebastian Bach's Cantata 115 for the entire group. Then followed arias and duets from a number of the other cantatas for all the singers accompanied by different combinations of instruments.

In the second part of the program Cantata 186 was given in its entirety and for the Bach absolutist this was probably the pinnacle of the evening.

But can there really be pinnacles in such a total performance?

One might single out the aria for soprano, oboe and continuo from Cantata 187, where the thrilling beauty of Lois Marshall's voice fell on the ear, reminiscent—possibly even more lovely—of the great Maggie Teyte at her best.

Or the gorgeous dark resonance of Maureen Forrester as she sang with flute and later with oboe. Or the two voices in perfect combination in the duet excerpts.

There is also to be recalled the rich tenor of Richard Lewis and bass of Norman Farrow; the brilliance and grace of flute, oboe and violin in the hands of Samuel Baron, Robert Bloom and Oskar Shumsky.

But all these memories blend together in the one lasting impression of unexampled artistry in performance of some of the world's greatest music.

Because nothing less will serve British Columbia.

B.C. Tel has a billion-dollar plan

Electronically Controlled Switching is part of it.

Why should seven relatively small communities be the first in British Columbia to have electronically-controlled telephone exchanges — and the new phone services these computer-like switches make possible?

A very basic reason: These exchanges now have become the most practical means through which B.C. Tel can meet the increased demands for phone services in communities of this size, where population growth is bringing greater telephone service requirements.

The communities involved now are Sparwood in the East Kootenay; Houston and Mackenzie in the Northern Interior; Winfield and Lakeview Heights in the Okanagan; and Port Hardy and Lantzville on Vancouver Island. Others will follow.

Their new exchanges, designed and built in Canada to serve communities with up to 2,500 phones, read signals from dial or touch-calling phones and complete connections almost instantly. And their memory facility makes additional kinds of services possible for those desiring them, including:

Call Waiting, where a tone on the line you are using signals that another incoming call has been attempted; Three-Way Calling which enables you — on local calling — to connect your own three-way conference call; and Speed Calling, in which you may have the exchange programmed so you can reach frequently-called numbers by dialing only one or two digits.

In B.C.Tel's planning, such new technology is applied where and when practical or necessary as part of the continuing program of telephone network expansion and improvement so essential to meet the growing demands of British Columbians for phone services.

Such an approach is basic to orderly and economic advancement of the phone system to meet the increasing demands — and changing desires — for phone services throughout this vast and rugged province. It is implicit in the expansion program for the 1970s — expressed as B.C. Tel's Billion-Dollar Plan because that is the minimum cost the company faces in creating new and improved facilities necessary to fill British Columbia's projected telephone requirements.

Nothing less will serve the growing number of British Columbians.

Cleaners Taken For $5,000

Victoria police are looking for thieves who stole a safe containing between $3,000 and $5,000 from Individual Dry Cleaners, 1602 Fort, overnight Sunday.

The culprits, police said, loaded the safe into a company truck on the premises and drove off. The money represented the Thursday, Friday and Saturday receipts for the nine Individual Dry Cleaners stores in the Victoria area.

The truck was located, minus the safe, at Victoria Senior Secondary about 6:30 a.m. Monday. It was parked, police said, between a school wall and a concrete bleacher so it wasn't visible from the road.

Tennis Court Bids May Be Long Rally

It may be a long rally but if the players are skilful Saanich Peninsula tennis buffs, may eventually win the courts they need.

At Saanich school board's meeting on Monday, building and grounds superintendent Brian Shaw showed plans for tennis courts at North Saanich, Mount Newton and Royal Oak junior high schools.

At Royal Oak, said Shaw, Saanich municipality has already indicated it will help with three new courts. At Mount Newton two courts can be provided when the parking lot is re-arranged. At North Saanich, where a rundown court is the only one north of those in Centennial Park, Central Saanich, three new courts would cost $8,500.

The building superintendent hoped that Sidney and North Saanich will follow the example of municipal help set by Saanich.

The trustees approved the scheme in principle but were gloomy about outside assistance. Trustee Harry Tobin commented it might be an exercise in futility to ask for help and Trustee Trevor Davis, North Saanich alderman, suggested the single court at North Saanich could be fixed up instead.

Chairman Jack Armstrong said he was surprised by local attitudes: "Saanich built tennis courts at Claremont Senior High and will help at Royal Oak."

While the ball is bouncing the school board will make temporary repairs in the North Saanich court.

DUPLEXES REMAIN DUPLEXES

Saanich Rejects Man's Plea

Saanich council was unsympathetic when told Monday night that a man faces bankruptcy because of a business deal involving the moving of three duplexes into the municipality.

Philip Strutt sought rezoning to permit conversion of the duplexes, at 901-903 and 905-907 Falmouth Road, into quadruplexes. Eight-foot basements were earlier built under the duplexes.

Nine residents spoke against the rezoning application and handed in a 50-name petition. They questioned the aesthetic values of the property, asked how the buildings were moved to the site, in the middle of the night, and why they were raised to provide space for extra accommodation.

Ald. William Noel said his sympathy was reduced by the fact Strutt had not take previous council actions seriously.

Asked later about this, Noel said Strutt had said before he had no intention of making the duplexes into quadruplexes and that the extra space below was just for basements.

Ald. Edith Gunning said it was "a very sad situation."

Council approved zoning for 31 townhouses on three acres at 4051 and 4061 Shelbourne Street, at Feltham, despite opposition from the Gordon Head and District Ratepayers Association which said it was spot rezoning; although adding the development had some merit it it was within the context of an official community plan.

Also approved were:

- Construction of a second house at 161 Lohr Road;
- Rear of Vernon Avenue, adjacent to property facing Symour previous zoned for apartments, for medium density apartment use with indications 92 units will be built, subject to council seeing sketch plans before final reading of the bylaw;
- Five units of row housing, 866 Tolmie Avenue;
- Deletion of auto court and motel use on the south side of the Trans-Canada Highway at Burnside Road, property held by the provincial government and proposed to be part of the Cuthbert Holmes Park;
- Allowing basements in row houses and garden apartments, but not to be lived in;
- Limiting height of wood frame apartments to 38 feet and limit such buildings to four levels of usable space;
- Rezoning to the duplex zone all lands not already in this zone on which a two-family dwelling is situated.

Council tabled three rezoning applications:

- Shoe sales and repairs, southeast corner of Cloverdale Avenue and Inverness Street;
- Deletion of electric and gas administrative, in a tenance and distribution centre use, east end of Portage Road off Admirals Road;
- Amending storage area requirements in light industrial zones.

Heater Blamed For Loss of House

DUNCAN — An "airtight" heater was blamed today for the fire at the weekend which destroyed a Tzouhalem Road home and left nine persons homeless.

Southend Fire Chief Pete Henry said he does not agree with the use of the old-fashioned heaters but, that if they are used, "people should be a lot more careful . . . they should be watched all the time."

Mrs. Gus Joe said she started the heater about 5 a.m. and two hours later noticed flames burning up the wall. She took her seven children to safety before calling for help.

Mr. Joe was at work.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Editor: G. S. Kent

Pacific Pete

Twelve-month results of Pacific Petroleums Ltd. show a 16 per cent increase in net operating profit from 1969, or $16.96 million (80 cents a share) vs. $14.56 million (70 cents).

Revenues, at $100.33 million, surpassed $100 million for the first time and were $11.88 million greater than in 1969. Cash flow stood at $36.49 million ($1.73) against $31.85 million ($1.52).

The 1970 period marked the end of a decade since Pacific acquired the Canadian properties of Phillips Petroleum and Sunray Oil, after which sales hit $20 million and profit was $1 million.

Macnays

The machine and engineering tool distributor division of G. K. N. International (Canada) Ltd., known as Macnays, has been acquired by Samuel Osborn Canada Ltd., of Brampton.

Macnays has Vancouver and Toronto warehouses for distribution of cutting tools, vises, precision tools and similar equipment for industry across Canada.

W. J. Gage

Cash proceeds from the sale of its text book division will be applied by W. J. Gage Ltd. to the redemption of $500,000 remaining 6¼ per cent 15-year sinking fund bonds on May 1.

The issue, originally worth $1.6 million, is due May 1, 1972.

The remaining bonds will be redeemed at par plus accrued interest.

Gould Inc.

Gould Inc., of Chicago, has agreed to acquire Dictaphone Corp., of Rye, N.Y. on the basis of a share exchange.

Tentative agreement is to give one share of Gould for each 2¾ common shares of Dictaphone, which based on 3.88 million shares of Dictaphone outstanding, would make the transaction worth $54 million.

Dictaphone stockholders would get value of $13.77 a share, based on the closing price of $11.62½ for Dictaphone and $37.87½ for Gould March 16.

Triarch, Jonlab

Two private investment firms, both involved in the successful repatriation of John Labatt Ltd. from an American brewer have merged to provide a capital pool of up to $25 million for investment, mainly in Canadian industry.

Toronto-based merchant bank Triarch Corp. Ltd. merged with Jonlab Investments Ltd. of London, Ont., with the latter acquiring a 50.5 per cent interest in Triarch from Deltec Banking Corp. of Nassau.

Triarch was formed in 1953 by British, U.S. and Canadian financial interests.

Jonlab, owned by senior executives of Brascan Ltd., Toront, and John Labatt Ltd., London, Ont., was formed in 1966 to assist in the effort to repatriate Labatt.

Allstate

The Allstate Insurance Companies of Canada report a net underwriting loss in property and casualty lines of $2.2 million during 1970 compared with a 1969 loss of $459,000.

Losses on automobile insurance policies accounted for a major portion of the decline.

New Jersey Corp. in Move to Take Over IOS

WASHINGTON (WP) — Securities and Exchange Commission officials said Monday they were investigating a Fairfield, N.J., manufacturing company's move to take over ailing I.O.S. Ltd., the giant, Geneva-based mutual fund.

The SEC, however, would give no indication whether it was considering filing charges against the company — International Controls Corp. — or its president Robert L. Vesco.

It was revealed Monday that in a preliminary prospectus filed March 5 with SEC, that International Controls plans to organize a corporation — of which it would own at least 25 per cent — that would offer to acquire the assets of IOS.

Last summer Vesco parlayed a $5 million loan to IOS from an International Controls subsidiary into a seat on the IOS board of directors, a seat on its executive committee, and chairmanship of its financial committee. On Feb. 26 Vesco was elected chairman of IOS's board.

Under a 1967 SEC order, IOS withdrew its registration as a U.S. broker-dealer, agreed to stop selling securities to Americans and stop any of its activities in the SEC domain.

On Dec. 30 International Controls filed a prospectus stating that the SEC staff thought the company might have violated the 1967 agreement.

In its March 5 prospectus, the company said it did not feel it was subject to the 1967 agreement.

A spokesman for the company said, "International Controls was not a party to the 1967 agreement. In 1967 the SEC required IOS to make some disclosure of finances that IOS was unable to provide. Under the reorganization of IOS, we will be able to meet the SEC requirements."

U.S. Shareholders Increase by Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the stock market decline last year, the number of shareholders grew by about one million to an estimated 31.9 million, a New York Stock Exchange study shows.

Dr. William C. Freund, the exchange's senior economist, predicts the number of individual shareholders in the United States will grow to nearly 40 million in 1975 and to 50 million in 1980.

Freund said individuals probably would buy and sell an average of 11 million shares a day in 1980, compared with 7.9 million in 1969.

$3.6 Billion Sales Reported by Boeing

SEATTLE (AP) — The highest sales in the history of Boeing Co., amounting to $3.6 billion during 1970, were reported in the aerospace firm's annual report Monday.

But the firm predicted that sales in 1971 will be below the record level, reflecting lower deliveries under all jet transport programs.

The 1970 record sales were an increase of $842.4 million over 1969 sales. Net earnings were reported at $22 million, compared to $10.2 million in 1969.

Net 1970 earnings included operating earnings of $4.7 million and investment tax credit amortization of $17.3 million. Net earnings per share in the same year were $1.02 and net profit on sales was six-tenths of 1 per cent, up from 47 cents and four-tenths of 1 per cent.

Boeing officials blamed the continued low level of earnings on reduced production of 707, 727 and 737 jet transports; lower earnings on reduced government program sales, inflation, commercial program writeoffs and unanticipated engine and other costs in connection with the introduction of the 747 jumbo jet.

Bank Debits Show Gain

TORONTO (CP) — Debits on private bank accounts for the month of February were $65,775.7 million, up from $58,174.5 million for the same month last year, the Canadian Bankers' Association reports.

Total current account debits were $55,013 million while personal checking debits reached $791.8 million. Debits on savings accounts were $2,369.7 million.

The figures represent the total debited by banks through the 51 clearing house areas in Canada. They do not include cheques drawn on the federal government, the Bank of Canada or the chartered banks themselves.

Splashdown.

Perhaps not as dramatic as the landing of a moon rocket, this stage in a timber drive is significant in its own right. These logs are on their way to Northwood lumber and pulp mills. Each season about 500,000 logs are scheduled for river delivery, the most economical and dependable means of transportation. They are dumped well away from spawning grounds to protect the salmon in their annual run.

Strikers' Wives March

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — Wives of striking tradesmen at the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. operation met federal mediator J. S. Gunn of Ottawa when he arrived in this Northern Manitoba community Monday.

About 500 women earlier in the day marched through the streets in a show of support for their husbands, who have been on strike since January, leaving the town's main industry and about 2,400 workers idle.

A spokesman for the wives, Delores Baird, said the group wanted to impress on Gunn and on all parties "the urgency of ending the strike in a just and honorable way."

Ombudsman Busy

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Ombudsman George B. McClellan handled more complaints than ever before in the year ended Oct. 31, 1970.

In his fourth annual report, tabled in the legislature Monday, McClellan said, including complaints brought forward from previous years, the ombudsman's office concluded 899 cases during the year and still has 100 under investigation.

Police 'Obstructed'

CALGARY (CP) — The city police commission, headed by Mayor Rod Sykes, was accused Monday of hindering the work of the police force.

The accusation was contained in a report on civic management by Mr. Justice W. G. Morrow, chief justice of the Northwest Territories court, who had conducted a public inquiry into the situation.

"The recital of evidence convinced me . . . there has been interference or obstruction of the Calgary police force through the operation of the police commission," he said.

Outbreak Controlled

GRAND CACHE, Alta. (CP) Dr. Helmut Kohlhepp, medical health officer, said Monday an outbreak of head lice which infected much of the population in this northwestern Alberta community earlier this month is now under control. Health personnel examined or treated most of the town's 3,000 population during the outbreak.

Contract Signed

CALGARY (CP) — Carpenters in six Alberta centres approved a two-year contract Sunday giving them a 25.5 per cent wage increase and another paid holiday. About 4,300 members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America in Edmonton, Red Deer, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Edson and Calgary are affected. Current base rate is $4.70 an hour.

4~Ply nylon

SIZES TO FIT MOST CARS, INCLUDING IMPORTS

Last year this same tire sold for $21.95. Now Goodyear helps you beat inflation by cutting the price of this popular tire to $18.95, a saving of $3. That means you get more value for your dollar. And Goodyear value starts with Goodyear's manufacturing know-how—the best in the tire industry.

For safety and durability, Goodyear builds the Safety All-Weather with four full plies of nylon cord in a rugged bias-ply construction. This provides a strong tire body for long trouble-free service.

Then Goodyear uses long-wearing Tufsyn rubber in the tread to deliver the best mileage of any tire in its class. And Goodyear's wrap-around shoulder, slotted tread design gives you improved steering stability and extra traction.

Sizes are available for most domestic cars as well as imports such as Volkswagen, Toyota, Datsun and Volvo.

Dollar for dollar, the Safety All-Weather is your best tire value in its price class and it is covered by Goodyear's no limit guarantee honoured by dealers throughout North America.

B.C. News Roundup

Fire Kills Man

KITIMAT (CP) — One man died and two others escaped when fire swept through a house early Monday. David John Lapp, 24, was killed in the blaze. Fire chief Aubrey Creed said the fire appeared to have started in a chesterfield.

★ ★ ★

Judge Dies

KIMBERLEY (CP) — Judge W. E. Leaman, a magistrate and later a provincial judge in this southeastern B.C. community, has died at the age of 71.

★ ★ ★

Forger Jailed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alexander Findlay, aged 38, of no fixed address, was sentenced to three years in jail Monday on 35 counts of forgery. Court was told Findlay opened bank accounts using stolen department of national revenue cheques on which he forged names and countersigned them, withdrawing the money to buy heroin.

Hazard Claimed

PENTICTION (CP) — Burning of plastics in garbage may lead to a serious hazard to the environment, says the annual report of the South Okanagan Health Unit, released Monday.

The report says one effect of burning garbage which has recently come to light is that volatilization of plastics releases polychlorinated byphenyls into the air as gas.

It says the chemical is returned in fallout and has the ability to act as a mutagenic agent in water and soil, in a fashion similar to DDT and other chlorinated hydrocarbons.

Stewart Waives Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Glen Stewart has waived appeal of his conviction for murdering Bible camp caretaker Cornelius (Gordon) Kralt, 23, his lawyer said Monday.

Stewart, 43, has been taken to the British Columbia Penitentiary in New Westminster to begin serving a life term.

He was convicted last week in Nanaimo. Kralt was shot and stabbed last year at Pachena Bay.

New Denture Invention

Plastic Cream Discovery Revolutionizes Denture Wearing

For the first time science offers a plastic adhesive cream that helps hold dentures—both uppers and lowers—as they've never been held before. It forms an elastic membrane that helps hold dentures firmer for hours.

It's FIXODENT™—the easy-to-use discovery that holds dentures firmer and more comfortably, too.

Because FIXODENT is so elastic, you may now bite harder, chew better, eat more naturally.

JAPANESE TOURISTS GIVE TIDE JUNIORS RUGBY LESSON

Sophisticated, Machine-Like and Mercilessly Executed

By STEVE HUME

All-Japan High Schools smashed Victoria's Junior Crimson Tide 29-6 with a dazzling exhibition of sophisticated rugby Monday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Despite a heavy, greasy pitch and a soggy ball, the Japanese routed Victoria with a combination of running and kicking that revealed a surprisingly advanced tactival knowledge of the game.

Using the quick heel from loose rucks to deadly advantage, the Japanese kept Victoria's three-quarter line off-balance and running backward for much of the game.

When they had the Tide backs going when they should have been coming, the Japanese would press their advantage with a kick to the open wing.

It was the kind of game plan one expects from seasoned senior players — a running strategy designed to wear down the opposition for a sudden coup de graee in the last 20 minutes of play.

And the tourists carried out the plan with poise and drive.

It wasn't just a matter of which team was able to execute the best fundamentals, the level at which most high school rugby is played.

It was rugby carried two steps beyond fundamentals.

The Japanese let it be known early that the loose was their game. Several times earl yin the match, before the Victoria scrum had tired, the Japanese forwards let the ball go in the sets and broke off fast to get control of the ruck.

Then they spun the ball out the back line, the forwards hustled to the point of the tackle, heeled the ball and did the same thing all over again in the opposite direction.

One of the cliches most often heard about Japanese rugby teams is that they operate with machine-like precision.

The beauty of the Japanese game Monday night was that the machine continually adapted and adjusted to brilliant individual talents.

The link between the tourist's scrum and the backfield was well developed, and the Japanese exploited the advantage mercilessly.

Number eight forward and captain Toshimasa Kawasaki, a rugged 18-year-old 182-pounder, was consistently brilliant. A fearsome runner in the loose, Kawasaki always had an eye for a blindside winger or the fly-half.

And in the backs, fullback Yukihiko Kobayashi, who normally plays centre, attacked with aggressive confidence. His moves gave the overlaps that earned a total of five tries by wingers Osamu Takemata and Masaru Fujiwara.

It was Kobayashi that provided the most spectacular play of the game, a breath-taking 100-yard gallop from behind his own goal line as he outraced three Victoria defenders — and had a man outside him all the way.

Minutes later it was Takemata's turn, with a 70-yard spurt through Victoria's crumbling backline.

That was the story of the game.

The Japanese ran, kicked and used the loose ruck to earn an 11-3 lead at the half while forcing Tide defenders to cross the field again and again.

Right after the intermission Victoria recovered somewhat, using a weight advantage to mount some bruising, battering action in the loose. It paid off when Doug Manning smashed through for a try to put his side back into the match.

It was a temporary respite.

With well-placed kicking the Japanese ran Victoria's backs, and fullback John Graham in particular, right into the ground. Graham displayed a lot of courage under tremendous pressure, bravely falling on the ball time after time to kill feet-on rushes by the attacking forwards.

But in the end the price the tourists exacted was too high. Backs who were at a disadvantage with respect to speed to begin with simply couldn't cope with the Japanese backfield attack during the last 15 minutes.

It was thanks to the Tide's back and second row forwards the score wasn't 15 points higher.

During the last 20 minutes All-Japan crossed Victoria's goal line five times, three times from 70 yards or more. One score, a superb backfield movement from the five-yard line was called back by a touch judge.

It was a break for Victoria but it didn't help much. Minutes later Kobayashi opened his 100-yard burst, and that was the play that broke the Tide once and for all.

BILL WALKER

The weekend in review, and now it is Penny May who is showing her heels to the hurdlers again, this time in a record-breaking performance at Calgary. Penny, who last year won the Sports Celebrity Dinner award as Victoria's female athlete of the year, was just making sure she wouldn't be forgotten, even if she isn't eligible to get that honor again tonight.

Besides, Miss May did it all up differently this time. Rather than use the accepted four-point stance, she went from a standing start. It was the considered opinion of her coach Lionel Pugh that this would enable her to get "better rhythm". Inovations such as these are never considered lightly, mind, and it was only after the times had been checked that Miss May was given the go-ahead. If the time clock showed it was quieker to the first hurdle from an upright position than from the crouched position, then Miss May and Pugh were prepared to believe it. Sunday they proved it. At least Miss May did, and she may have found a convert too.

Willie Turner, the U.S. Olympic ace, who also was competing at the meet, was seen experimenting with the "May Start". But then life is often made up of such distractions. It isn't always the record that is remembered longest, but how it came about.

Incidentally, Miss May is taking her training seriously this year, for selection to the Pan-American Games team is the main summer prize. She is making the trip to Vancouver each week for special training and tutelage under Pugh. Meanwhile, she has arranged her courses at Uvic so that she will not miss many classes. But just in case, she has a friend sitting in, and taking notes, for her at the missed lectures.

With Toronto Maple Leafs on the move, and appearing very strong as well, a good question for assistant general manager King Clancy at tonight's celebrity dinner, could be: What does he think about the Saturday TV "fight nights"?

A hockey fight once was considered more or less an unusual occurrence. Now it's regular fare, and not for the betterment of the game either. But then King may have some different views. If he wasn't exactly a brawler, he was a tough guy, and later a referee too.

Meanwhile, the Maple Leafs could be ripe for a good run at the Stanley Cup. Which is a much different opinion than was offered when they were here for a pre-season exhibition game. They do have a fine set of forwards, it was said then, and is repeated now. Their goalkeeping has never been bad, either, and appears to have improved with the addition of Bernie Parent. The addition of Bobby Baun has done much to help as well. For very little was heard of the Leafs for quite a time, then suddenly they blossomed and, in truth, must rank as the possible upsetter in the upcoming stakes. But the big question mark, from this corner, still is the defence. If it is suspect, perhaps "The King" will admit it, or refute it. He'll know better. Besides, he helps to run the store back there in Toronto.

Oops, tilt! And Victoria United has come to the end of a fine string. Fifteen games without defeat is the record that got upended on the mainland Sunday. And once again Vancouver Columbus are within hailing distance of the Coast Soccer League leadership. Which is not good. But then one in 16 isn't bad, either; and the plea for tolerance will be understood by soccer fans, but only until the next game, when a correction will be called for.

And if there was some question on the weekend as to who is John Miller, the young fellow who bogeyed himself out of a playoff in the Jacksonville Open on Sunday there shouldn't be. It will be recalled that last summer this was the same John Miller who shared the opening round lead of the Westchester classic with Jack Nicklaus, at the same time that the lefty-righty golf tournament was being played here.

Miller's sponsor, a kindly San Francisco businessman named Tom James, was playing at Royal Colwood that week, and he saw nothing but success ahead for his protege.

"He's a fine boy, and he doesn't drink or smoke, either", James said at the time. Miller earned over $40,000 last year, and may be on the threshhold of greatness. He was only a two-foot putt away on Sunday. "I gave him the money to get started," James said at the time. "There were no riders. I told him to pay me back when he could."

Czechs Uncover Form Before Ticklish Clash

BERN, Switzerland (CP) — International hockey's Big Red Machine, Russia, was idle today, preparing for its ticklish match with Czechoslovakia Wednesday.

So far, during the world hockey championships, the Soviet Union has split the opposition in little pieces, and the Swedes and Czechs are the only entries in the six-country tournament given any chance of upsetting the Russians.

Ever since the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968, the strained feelings between the two countries has extended to the ice rink. The Czechs defeated the Russians twice in 1969, but the Russians still retained the title on better goal average.

Last year in Stockholm, Russia defeated Czechoslovakia twice and won the title easily with nine wins and a single loss. Sweden, always a tough customer for Russia, beat the Russians the first time out in 1970, and then lost the return to finish second for the silver medal.

SWEDES LOSE GOALIE

Sweden is undefeated here in two starts, but has lost its top goalie, Leif Holmqvist, who had his nose broken in practice.

In their three games so far, the Soviet team has been adept at tearing holes in the defences of its opponents and scoring almost at will.

The Russians, world hockey champions since 1963, have scored a total of 29 goals in three games while allowing only five. Sweden is 10-7.

The Czechs, who went into the tournament rated slightly behind the Russians and Swedes, dropped a surprise 5-1 decision to the United States in their opening game and then fell to Sweden 6-5.

It wasn't until Monday that the Czechs appeared to be hitting their stride, downing West Germany 9-1.

U.S. THUMPED

In Monday's other game, the Russians wrecked the United States 10-2.

The Americans already are complaining of a flock of hurts and bruises. Their best goalie, Cecil Wetzel of Detroit, has a pulled hamstring muscle.

The tournament is a double round-robin event which winds up April 3 in Geneva. The organizers set up the draw with Sweden as the team to beat and scheduled the final game of the tournament between Russia and Sweden—as they did in 1970.

Canadian Beaten In Bid for Title

EDMONTON (C) — England's Bunny Sterling successfully defended his British Empire middleweight boxing title for the third time by outpointing Edmonton's Johan Louw Monday night in a 15-round bout.

Sterling's unanimous decision broke Louw's professional record of 17 straight wins.

On the basis of a five-point-a-round-must system used by the Edmonton boxing commission, judge Alex Wynnychuk voted 74-64 for Sterling. Judge Bob Milner voted 70-68 for the winner and referee Jack Berry marked his card 72-68.

Sterling's record now is 29 wins, five losses and three draws. He has scored only six knockouts in his career. There were no knockdowns Monday night.

He outpointed Kaha Managa in New Zealand and fought Tony Mundine to a draw in Australia in his two previous defences.

STERLING RALLIES

Louw, 26, a native of Paarl, South Africa and a former amateur champion of the Transvaal, is a third-year physical education student at the University of Alberta. He took the earlier rounds with his harder punching, but Sterling, the better boxer, rallied to take four of the last five rounds. Louw had never gone 15 rounds before.

Sterling, a third-year law student at Kingsway University, won the 10th, 11th, 12th and 15th rounds. By the fifth round, both boxers were bleeding.

Cats' Plowe, Bond Draw All-Star Nod

Victoria Cougars, the most successful team in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League, might feel slighted today after learning that only two of their members have been singled out for all-star acclaim.

Cougars posted the most victories (40), scored the most number of goals (384), allowed the fewest against (187) and amassed the greatest total of points (88) during the 60-game schedule.

But only Ted Plowe, named the all-star right winger, and defenceman Gerry Bond, singled out for second-team honors, were named by the all-star selectors.

TAGGART FAVORED

Okanagan Division players dominated the voting. Penticton Broncos showed the way by placing coach Jack Taggart, defenceman Bruce Affleck, goalie Dave McLelland and centre Vic Mercredi on the first team. Mercredi also was named the league's most valuable player.

While the voting was announced, Vancouver opened league playoffs Monday by skating to an 8-2 victory over New Westminster Royals in a riotous display before 1,050 fans at Kerrisdale Arena.

START WEDNESDAY

Cougars open their series against Chilliwack Bruins at Memorial Arena on Wednesday, starting at 8 p.m.

Both Okanagan Division semi-finals are scheduled to get under way tonight.

Gord Stewart scored twice for the Centennials, while singles came from Ray Todd, Mike McCarthy, Russell, Jim Chapman, Bob Gaston and Grant Casper.

Cubs Win Opener But Lose Goalie

TRAIL — Victoria Cubs won the contest by a narrow 10-9 margin but lost the services of regular goalie Bob Adamek for one game in the opener of a best-of-three B.C. junior "B" hockey semi-final here Monday.

Adamek was given a game misconduct after "moving into a fight" at 12:20 of the first period and will miss the second game scheduled for tonight. He will be replaced by backup boalie Dale Lunde.

Cubs were leading the game 9-3 late in the second period but were forced to hang on for the victory.

Don Blyth scored three goal to push Cubs into a 4-1 first-period lead while Ron Poole, who scored what turned out to be the winning goal in the third frame, added the other.

Gord Neilson (2), Glen McCallum, Jim Wilkinson and Mark Patterson scored to give Cubs a six-goal edge after the second period.

Trail, which collected earlier goals from Dave Palmer, Dave Costanzo, Bill Volcano and Terry McDougall, rallied in the third period with goals by Glen Kaputo (2), Norm Larmour, Morris Regnier and Dave Szlilagy before running out of time.

All of a Sudden, Stockers Champs

How's this for a change of pace?

Behind 3-1 in the best-of-seven Vancouver Island Hockey League final after a Saturday setback, Stockers North Americans combined a committee-room decision with a 7-4 victory over Chemainus Blues on Monday to collect the Colony Cup at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Blues had Friday's 10-4 victory at Esquimalt taken away because of the use of an ineligible player and lost the shortened best-of-five series, 3-2.

Both teams agreed to cut the series in a bitter meeting prior to the Monday game.

Blues' Gus Ryan was ruled ineligible for the playoffs because he had not played the required four regular season games for Chemainus.

FIRST PERIOD

No scoring.

Penalties — Thorne (C) (major, misconduct) and Ecklund (S) (major) 1:27; Westover (C) and Goulden (S) 7:40; Woodruff (C) 14:20; Stockers (bench minor) 14:20; Thorne (C) and Meyers (S) 19:25.

SECOND PERIOD

1. Stockers, Thompson (Allen, Meyers) 8:05.
2. Stockers, Allen (Goulden) 13:50.
3. Stockers, Goulden (Meyers, Woodley) 18:55.

Penalty — Kolody (C) (misconduct) 10:30.

Colquitz Rolls To Hoop Final

Colquitz nipped Metropolitan Spartans 42-40 Monday in a bantam boys' playoff game of the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association at Mount View High School.

Colquitz now advances to meet unbeaten Lansdowne in what could be the final of the four-team, double-loss elimination championship Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Mount View gymnasium. If Colquitz wins, the clubs will play Thursday at the same time and place.

Gordon Head, the other team in the tourney, was sidelined earlier.

Braves Selected

Saanich Braves, winners of the lower-Island peewee hockey championship, are one of the leading clubs in the province selected to play in an annual invitational tournament at Coquitlam.

Competition in the five-day peewee tourney will start on April 9.

Automatics Force Semi-Final to Limit

Victoria Automatic Transmission clipped Ingraham Buckaroos 5-4 Monday night to force a deciding game in the best-of-three Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League semi-final series at Memorial Arena.

The deciding contest will be played, beginning at 8:15 p.m., next Monday at the Arena with the winner advancing to the final against league-champion Empress Paint.

Dick Gibbons, Rick Hamilton, Ian Phillips and Joe Miller counted the other goals for VATs while Ken Waet (2), Wes Borkowski and Frank Coburn scored for Buckaroos.

Ted Kirby proved outstanding in the VAT net, parrying 47 shots. Kirby was particularly spectacular in the second period when Buckaroos outshot VATs 19-7.

Cashman Hurt In Auto Mishap

REVERE, Mass. (AP) — Wayne Cashman of the Boston Bruins suffered minor injuries Monday in an automobile accident on the Revere Beach Park way.

Braves Capture Junior B Series

Saanich Braves won the Lower Island junior "B" hockey tournament with a 6-3 victory over Esquimalt Sunday at Pearkes Arena in the final game of a round-robin series.

In games during the past two weeks, Braves also recorded a 5-4 win over Victoria and a 7-3 victory over Fuller Lake. The only Saanich loss was a 5-4 decision to Racquet Club of Victoria.

MEXICAN ATE ORANGES FOR MONTH

Berlitz and Baseball

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — If Francisco Estrada wants to scold an umpire or order a post-game meal this summer, the young catcher from Novojoa, Mexico, won't need an interpreter to get his point across.

New York Mets are seeing to it that he won't—in a first-time alliance of baseball and Berlitz.

Estrada and 16 other Spanish-speaking prospects ticketed for the Met's farm system are dividing their spring training days between the playing field and classroom as star pupils in a 25-day English crash course conducted by the Berlitz School of Language.

Berlitz instructor Albert Miner, flown in from New York by the Mets, is teaching the Latin players basic baseball words and phrases during daily, split sessions of 1½ hours each at the club's minor league headquarters. They also are learning the rudiments of off-the-field English.

Whitey Herzog, the Mets director of player development, suggested the language school after they acquired Estrada, who hit .303 and cracked 18 home runs for Mexico City Reds last year, in a conditional deal.

They also had signed a large number of youngsters from Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic in the last year.

Most of the Caribbean signees spoke little or no English. But it was Estrada's predicament that most disturbed the Mets.

"The only rap against him, according to scouts we talked to, was his lack of ability to communicate," McDonald said. "But, being a catcher, that's very important."

The language training may make the players more comfortable than Dominican infielder Teddy Martinez was when he reported to his first Florida training camp four years ago.

Martinez was 19, shy and self-conscious. And, so the story goes, he knew just one English word he could use in a restaurant or food store.

So he ate nothing but oranges for almost a month.

"That's why a phrase like 'ham and eggs' also is on our list," said McDonald. "Another one is 'change your sweatshirt.' That might sound funny, but how does a manager tell a guy who doesn't understand English to change his shirt without going through all kinds of contortions?"

Martinez orders three square meals a day now and isn't far away from making the New York club.

Estrada was invited to report to the Mets' early camp with the major league batterymen. He showed up a week late, accompanied by Martinez, who had found him wandering around the Miami airport in search of the Mets.

Returning Flood Finds It Tough To Regain Form

By GEORGE MINOT
The Washington Post

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. — The struggle of Curt Flood to come back after a self-imposed exile illustrates anew that baseball is an exact science which demands constant attention from the practitioners.

"He shouldn't have any trouble," said Robert Short, Washington Senators' most vocal cheerleader, shortly after adding Flood's name to his roster.

"He was out only a year. Other players are off four or five months in any event." Actually, it was closer to 1½ years, from October 1969, to February 1971, that Flood didn't swing a bat with full force, throw a ball with all his might and run as if chased by Ed Stroud.

It has not been easy for Flood to regain the skills which made him a 200-a-year hit man for the St. Louis Cardinals and the golden-gloved centre fielder of the National League. He didn't think it would be.

"Spring training is always tough," he said. "This one isn't any harder or easier than I thought it would be. I'm never much of a hitter in the spring."

★ ★ ★

Flood has "stung" the ball in only one of his first eight games, according to manager Ted Williams. That was March 8. He singled to right field and lined to the second baseman.

His other hits were a popped bunt and a grounder into the hole at shortstop.

"I can't say that there is any indication yet that he can come all the way back," said Williams. "You look at his record the last few years in the other league (.335, .301, .285) and you'd have to think he could."

The manager has noticed a recent sign of improvement in Flood. "He has a more authoritative swing," he said.

Flood dropped a fly ball the other day but of more concern was a toss from medium-deep centre as a runner tagged from third. He pumped once, threw toward home and the ball reached cutoff man Frank Howard, standing to the left of the mound, on one bounce.

That weak throw resurrected talk that Flood's arm was dead, a prevalent rumor when he was playing his final years in the NL. Flood, who strengthens his arm by swinging an iron ball, said his arm is not yet strong. As for the old "dead-arm" charge, Flood admitted he had trouble in 1968 but had regained full strength the next season.

There is a natural tendency to compare the return of Flood to that of Williams, who came back to hit .345 in 1954 for the Boston Red Sox after serving in the Korean War for most of two seasons. Like Flood now, Williams was in his early 30s.

Williams remembered that his playing ability "wasn't affected in the least" by the enforced layoff. He admitted it might not be as easy for Flood.

After 1½ years of inactivity and at age 33, Flood may have lost a half-step in his dash for first base, the manager conceded.

"If he has, that will cost him 10 hits a year," said Williams, "and that will take about 18 points off his average." Williams is good with numbers.

Still figuring, he continued, "that would have him hitting about .280 or .285, still a heck of a year."

Basketball Jamboree For Peninsula Teams

Little people noted for big enthusiasm are expected to once again have the walls of Mount Newton Junior Secondary School bouncing and bulging Friday and Saturday.

Small fry who make up the bulk of teams in the Peninsula Basketball Association will invade the school along with parents and friends for the Peninsula group's annual basketball jamboree.

Teams of boys and girls in pre-midget, midget, bantam and juvenile divisions are scheduled to play 29 games before a boys' Exhibition at 9:30 p.m. Saturday winds up the playing program.

Seven games are slated Friday, starting at 6 p.m. Saturday's contests begin at 10 a.m. and will continue almost nonstop until the curtain-dropper.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: A unique putting grip

End in Sight In Times Test

Less than four weeks remain in which pin-busters on southern Vancouver Island lanes can collect weekly awards and rolloff berths in the eighth annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Bowlers competing in regular league play have until April 16 to earn awards by rolling the high three-game series in one of four divisions — men's and women's fivepins, and men's and women's tenpins.

The competitor rolling the highest total in each category during a week receives a Bowler-of-the-Week crest and qualifies for the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs on May 2. Fivepinners will chase cash and glory at Town and Country Lanes, starting at 1 p.m., while tenpinners will battle at Mayfair Lanes, firing their first shots at 2:30.

BONUS AWARD

Each rolloff winner will collect a Times Trophy and any rolloff champion that is also a daily subscriber to The Victoria Times will receive a bonus award of $100.

Bowlers are currently competing in the 23rd week of the 26-week contest and winners of awards will be announced this week.

Several outstanding scores have been recorded so far this season as a result of the keen rivalry.

ESTHER DILLON LEADS

Esther Dillon leads the list of women's fivepin winners with a 971 series rolled at Gibson's Bowladrome. Fran Woodruff is second highest with a 957 series hurled at the same house during the first week.

Two male fivepinners managed to break the "one-grand" barrier. Wally Weinberger scattered pins for a 1,008 series on the ninth week after Marvin Larson had connected for 1,003 in the eighth week. Both series were bowled at Gibson's.

Only Roy Kerr and Henry Loo managed over-700 series thus far among male keglers. Kerr leads the list with a 709 during the 16th week and Loo toppled pins for a 707 during the 15th week.

All the tenpin series were rolled at Mayfair.

CITY ENTRY OFFICIALLY IN BIG FOUR

VANCOUVER — It's official.

Victoria was formally accepted into the Big Four Junior Football League in a joint announcement by league-president Hans Finkien and Victoria-entry president Sam Taylor.

Victoria coach Frank Hindle was also present at the league meeting.

City Sailors Impress

By PAT DUFOUR

Junior sailors of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club earned themselves an impressive victory on the weekend, beating out competition from six other clubs to win the Gladwell Trophy.

After 16 races, sailed in Flying Juniors, the local sailors ended up with a 12-point lead on their nearest competitors, from the Seattle Yacht Club.

Also competing were crews from the West Vancouver Yacht Club, Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, the Corinthian Yacht Club of Seattle and the Maple Bay Yacht Club.

Sailing under Royal Vic. colors were Dennis Woodward, Rhys Williams, Philip Huggett, Dave Richardson, Rick MacBride, John Hall, Rob Thompson and Glen Fraser.

Sunday saw the last race of the second winter series for Royal Vic. keel boats being sailed in waters off Sidney.

Seventeen boats were on the line for the start but 10 failed to finish, foiled by fluky breezes and an adverse ebb tide.

Guy Serecch's Morgan placed first over-all of those that finished. She was followed by Don Lawson's Cubara, Louie Lindholm's Moonraker, Fred Gardiner's Shi Yen, Stan Jones' Tandem II, George Dufour's Galenaia II and Peter Coombs' Doxy II.

Total points on the series gives Cubara two wins, that of over-all first boat and first boat in Division I. Galenaia II and Doxy II share the honors for second winners over-all and first-place boats for Division II. Fourth over-all in the series is Denny Cloverdale's Melee.

Twenty-six boats of the Turkey Head Sailing Association paced it out in a 15-mile long-distance race on Sunday in waters off Victoria.

Six Royal Vic. Boats are among the 51 entries registered for the 122-mile Strait of Georgia race on Easter weekend. They are Cubara, Morgan, Galenaia II, Melee, Frank Bush's Concubine and Stewart Holman's Keela. Another Vancouver Island entry is John Tarr's Concerto of the Nanaimo Yacht Club.

Derek Cove of the West Vancouver Yacht Club, who are again organizing the race, says he expects to have the field increase to 85 during the next two weeks.

NOTICE TO BATHTUBBERS

The organizers of the Oak Bay Tea Party wish to advise all Bathtubbers of their first annual 10 mile Oak Bay Centennial "Teacup Trophy Dash" to be held on May 30th at 1:30 p.m. at Willows Beach, Victoria.

Victoria Bowlers Tops in Masters

Cy Wallis and Vera Lysne of Victoria emerged with victories Sunday in the Vancouver Island section of the Master Bowlers' Association of B.C. annual spring fivepin championships held at three centres across the province.

Wallis rolled a 1,733 series at Duncan Bowling Centre to win men's laurels and collect the $100 first prize. Wally Weinberger of Victoria was second with 1,655 while another Victoria bowler, John Broste, placed third with 1,653.

Mrs. Lysne's 1,581 total was only two more points than the series rolled by runner-up Adel McInnes of Duncan. Mrs. Lysne received $70 for first place and June Peddlesden of Victoria placed third with 1,483.

Test Century Sparks India

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (Reuter) — India resumes its first innings here today trailing by 107 runs with five wickets standing on the fourth day of the third cricket test against the West Indies.

The touring team, which leads 1-0 in the series, lost nearly two hours' batting on the third day because of rain and bad light but continue its innings at 256 for five today boosted by a maiden test century by 21-year-old opener Sunil Gavaskar.

Gavaskar reached 100 in 245 minutes with 10 fours and shared a stand of 112 for the third wicket with Gundappa Vishwanath, who made 50. Gavaskar was eventually out for 116, caught at slip off West Indies captain Gary Sobers.

POLITICAL CRISIS NOT OVER

No Pakistan Agreement Yet—Sheik

DACCA (AP) — Sheik Mujibur Rahman, rebellious leader of East Pakistan, denied today that he had reached an agreement with President Abha Mohammed Yahya Khan to end the political crisis in the divided country.

Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, West Pakistan's chief political leader, told reporters Monday night that he was examining the terms of a general agreement which he said Mujib and Yahya had reached. Bhutto said he would "make every effort to reach an understanding."

However, Mujib said he and Yahya had reached no agreement about an interim government. He added that he and the president had not scheduled another meeting, but he refused to comment further.

The agreement which the three leaders discussed in a series of meetings Monday is believed to call for interim central and provincial civilian governments and the lifting of martial law.

Mujib's Awami League, which will have a majority in the new National Assembly if the assembly ever meets, demands autonomy for East Pakistan, which is separated from the west by 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

Today, while 15,000 spectators applauded, about 600 youths carrying dummy rifles goose-stepped around a sports stadium in a demonstration against martial law and raised the olive, red and gold flag of Bengladesh, or Bengaliland, the nationalist name for East Pakistan. Then they marched six miles through Dacca to Sheik Mujib's home.

The demonstration was timed for Pakistan Day today, a national holiday which is being celebrated in Dacca as a "resistance day."

BANDIT RUNS INTO 64-YEAR-OLD BUZZSAW

Graver swung at the bandit and missed, and the youth retaliated by hitting Graver on the head with the gun. Then Graver kicked the gun out of his hand and kicked the youth in the stomach.

Police Net Ends Drug Odyssey

LONDON (AP) — British customs officers today seized a truck with Swedish licence plates and $1,200,000 worth of marijauna after an operation involving the police of six countries.

Three men were arrested but a man and a woman escaped.

The truck's odyssey from Kabul, Afghanistan, across Europe to London was worthy of the most lurid thriller.

British police were tipped off shortly after the vehicle left Kabul with its cargo of drugs, authorities said. Then at British request it was shadowed as it progressed across Turkey, Yugoslavia, West Germany and France until it boarded a cross-channel ferry at Boulogne.

British customs officers took over the vigil at the port of Dover and tracked the truck to a car park in south London which it reached Saturday.

DON'T SEND KIDS TO SCHOOL

Want to Change System?

Want to help change the education system? Don't send your kids to school.

That's the message of Saturna Island Free School director Tom Durrie who spoke to an audience of about 70 people at the University of Victoria Monday.

Durrie, a former teacher in the B.C. school system, said there is absolutely nothing to be gained by trying to change the system from within.

MORE IMPACT

"I've made more impact on the system since the free school started than when I was a teacher," he said. "Two weeks ago I spoke to a group of 500 teachers and a lot of them got angry. But when I was a teacher in a little elementary school I was nothing more than a thorn in the side of the administration."

The free school is conducting an "end compulsory education" campaign through the sale of post cards which carry that slogan. Durrie assured the audience the state would not bring legal sanctions against parents who refuse to send their children to school.

He said institutions like schools, prisons and hospitals seem to exist to do the opposite of what they are supposed to do. Schools keep people dumb, prisons ensure crime, mental hospitals ensure a certain amount of insanity and hospitals keep people sick.

As an example, he cited the schools' efforts to inculcate into students care for their textbooks so they wouldn't mutilate them or write obscenities in them.

"My observation was that this teaching had precisely the opposite effect. While the kids were being taught this, they were inflicting more damage on their books."

Efforts which aimed at developing in children a "love of learning" had equally disastrous results: they ended up hating school.

NOT ACCIDENTAL

"This all can't be just accidental," Durrie said. "Somewhere deep in the social subconscious the aim of education is to make education unpleasant."

If the schools truly educated people, he asked, would people allow the beaches to be covered with oil slicks, submit to living under the present economic system and allow nuclear power generating plants to be built?

"Why does he have to suffer through all the other garbage in order to be with his friends?" Durrie asked.

Durrie disagrees with teachers who say public schools are becoming freer because students can work at their own speed at subjects of their own choosing. The "old message" is still there, and the old message is that the teacher knows best and that the student must pass through certain steps (reading, writing arithmetic, etc.) before he can be free.

The essentially authoritarian nature of schools affects teachers as well as pupils. After four or five years of training, the teachers remain under the watchful eye of administrators.

"Why did they go through all that training if at the end of it they can't be trusted to function in a responsible manner?"

The first step in getting rid of state education as it now exists is to abolish compulsory education.

"I hope more and more people will be sensible enough not to send their kids to school and that more and more kids will not go."

BIGGEST LIE

Durrie said the belief that an education is necessary in order to survive in this competitive, technological society is "the biggest lie that was ever foisted on young people," and the proof is in the staggering number of unemployed people with degrees of all kinds.

Family Maintenance Act Applauded by Opposition

Opposition members told the government Monday they welcomed its bill to amend the Wives and Children's Maintenance Act.

But they said it should have been introduced earlier so it could be studied more.

Ernie Hall (NDP-Surrey) said the bill is far better than his Party had expected. And Garde Gardom (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) called it the "bill of the session" insofar as fundamental changes in any one law were concerned.

Notable sections of the bill make women legally responsible for financial support of their children and confer the same responsibility to men who have lived common-law for a year or more.

Gardom said these important changes deserve long study. But Attorney-General Leslie Peterson told the house the bill would be referred to the social welfare and education committee so MLAs could get more reaction from people familiar with family law.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said the bill was so important it should have been introduced earlier in the session.

He warned that family problems can get so complex that the key to their solution is not in law, but in flexibility before the court.

Speaking to sections of the bill which allow husbands custody of children or access when wives get custody, Barrett said parents should be told bluntly why they are not getting access or custody.

CHILDREN SHOULD KNOW

This would prevent one parent from using his children as "pawns" against the other parent. If a parent is unfit to care for or see his children, the children should know exactly why this is so, Barrett said.

Gordon Dowding (NDP Burnaby-Edmonds) said all custody, access and maintenance questions should be handled in the family division of provincial court and not in supreme court as is also possible.

Minister Without Portfolio Grace McCarthy assured Barrett the bill does not intend to solve every case by legislation. Mrs. McCarthy said she had been permitted to do a lot of work preparing the bill.

Gardom had foreseen problems in getting common-law husbands to pay maintenance. But Mrs. McCarthy said the more important problem is how women in common-law marriages will support their children after their men leave them.

She said the section which makes women financially liable to support their children is a "tribute to the women's liberation movement."

By this she meant that women are working more now than before, and in some cases earn more than their husbands.

Peterson also said that two bills related to the maintenance bill also will be referred to the committee. These are bills to amend the Small Claims Act and the Attachment of Debts Act. The amendment to the Wives and Children's Maintenance Act received second reading.

NDP Urges Profit Report

The government should publish an annual report of profits from provincial land tax sales, Opposition Leader Dave Barrett told the legislature Monday.

Barrett received no answer from Premier Bennett when he asked how much the government has made from land sales in the last 10 years. The NDP leader's point was simply that people should know how much money they have received from the sales of public land.

Barrett was speaking during debate on third reading of an Act to Amend the Taxation Act. The bill creates a government-appointed committee to decide how to dispense with provincial lands acquired from individuals who have not paid their taxes.

MORE MONEY

Barrett said he welcomed the bill, and he asked that tax sale land be retained by the crown and leased. This would bring in more money.

If the government wants to sell tax-sale lands, he said, it should do so only to Canadians or people intending to become Canadians.

Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) said the next move the government should make in this field is to extend the bill to cover municipal land tax sales.

The bill received third and final reading.

Shareholders Retain Par Reduction Voice

Minority shareholders of the Seaboard Life Assurance Company have been successful in securing their right to have a say in the reduction of par values of company shares.

The shareholders won aggrement from the company directors that any reduction in par value must be approved by 75 per cent of shareholders.

Also agreed was a provision that the change would be voted at a special meeting for which 21 days notice must be given.

The compromises were reached between company directors and the Seaboard Shareholders Protective Committee after the legislature's private bills committee had told the parties to settle their differences before it proceeded to recommend a private members' bill which would have allowed a reduction in the par value of Seaboard shares from $5 to $2.

TOO MUCH POWER

Minority shareholders objected to the bill in its original form, because they said it gave too much power to Canamera Enterprises Ltd. which controls more than 50 per cent if Seaboard shares.

Private bills committee chairman Bert Price (SC — Vancouver-Burrard) said in an interview outside the legislature Monday that the compromises are written into amendments to the bill.

He added that the committee also amended the bill to allow participating policy holders to receive notice of proxy when meetings are called instead of their having to apply for proxy.

Price told the legislature that the committee has recommended the bill be proceeded with in amended form.

Young Offenders Bill Returns To Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Second reading of the young offenders bill, subject of more adjectives than an unpopular tax, resumed in the Commons Monday night after two months of second thoughts by the government.

Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer yanked the bill in January after opposition MPs read a list of complaints against the proposed replacement for the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

It was described as a junior Criminal Code and a "simplistic Spiro Agnew approach" to youthful offenders.

Debate on the bill was to resume today.

Mr. Goyer defended the legislation as a switch to legal protection and away from paternalism. However, he has indicated changes will be made.

In other business Monday, the Commons:

—Passed Justice Minister John Turner's arrest and bail reform bill hoping police and courts will observe its spirit.

PLAN OUTLINED

In a statement, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury sketched to a skeptical opposition plans to hire 225 Francophone graduates under a special program this year.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said later his party hasn't decided whether or not to support the idea, aimed at providing equality of opportunity for French-speaking Canadians in the chartered banks, were singled out for criticism. MPs pointed angrily at recent service-charge increases and at criticism by the banks of government policy.

Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, was singled out by New Democrats and Creditistes for warning that unemployment may be necessary to avoid another bout of inflation.

Creditiste Gerard Laprise (Abitibi) proposed that Mr. Rasminsky's salary be reduced to that of the average unemployed worker.

On the textile bill, Paul St. Pierre (L—Gaspe-Chibouctou) warned that the consumer always pays for protectionism.

ASK PUBLIC ROLE

He and other MPs fought for amendments that would open decisions of a proposed textile and clothing board to public scrutiny.

One clause in the textile bill would allow government to lift imports of any product found, after investigation by the federal anti-dumping tribunal, to be damaging domestic industries.

Deferred votes on the amendments to the bill, including one by Mr. St. Pierre, will be taken today. A vote on Mr. St. Pierre's amendment, opposed by the government, was forced by four western Liberals, including Mr. St. Pierre, as well as six Conservatives.

The young offenders bill, which has raised hackles in welfare agencies and juvenile courts, ran into a continued adjectival assault as Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) said it is still formal and punitive.

HOLY PROPHETS

Jack Bigg (PC—Fernie) former RCMP sergeant, said youths will still be locked up "and put away from the help they need so desperately."

He said the bill should be broken into two parts—a bill of rights for the young, which the government says it is, and a section emphasizing treatment and a close-to-home atmosphere.

The bill defines a young offender as a person between 10 and 21.

The maximum age for trial in family courts would be 17 in all provinces but Quebec and Manitoba, where it would be 18. It would be 18 for girls in Alberta.

The higher age provision has drawn fire in Ontario, where government estimates it would cost $30 million to provide facilities. The Ontario maximum now is 16.

West Germans Buy Phantoms

BONN (AP) — The West German defence ministry announced today it plans to buy F-4 Phantom jets from the United States to replace its ill-fated F-104G Starfighters, and its G-91 Flat jets.

The announcement made no mention of the number of planes to be bought, but ministry sources said the total would be between 175 and 229. Such an order would be worth more than $1,000 million.

The Phantoms are expected to begin joining the Luftwaffe in 1974, officials said.

They are to serve as a transitional plane until the 1980s, when West Germany's armed forces are to be equipped with the multi-role combat aircraft, or MRCA, being developed by Britain, West Germany and Italy.

Flu Bug Smog Bound

A potent flu bug working its way through the lower mainland is having only a slight effect on the Victoria area so far, school and health officials noted today.

Absenteeism in mainland schools and offices soared this week, with victims off for a week with high fever, sore throat, coughs and other symptoms. A Vancouver health officer said he did not think there would be an epidemic.

* * *

Absenteeism is up slightly at most Victoria-area schools. Most principals blame the flu although there also are reports of mumps and rubella.

The typical pattern is that reported by Central Junior High. Students there are staying home one day, returning to school the next and then being laid low for a week by the virus.

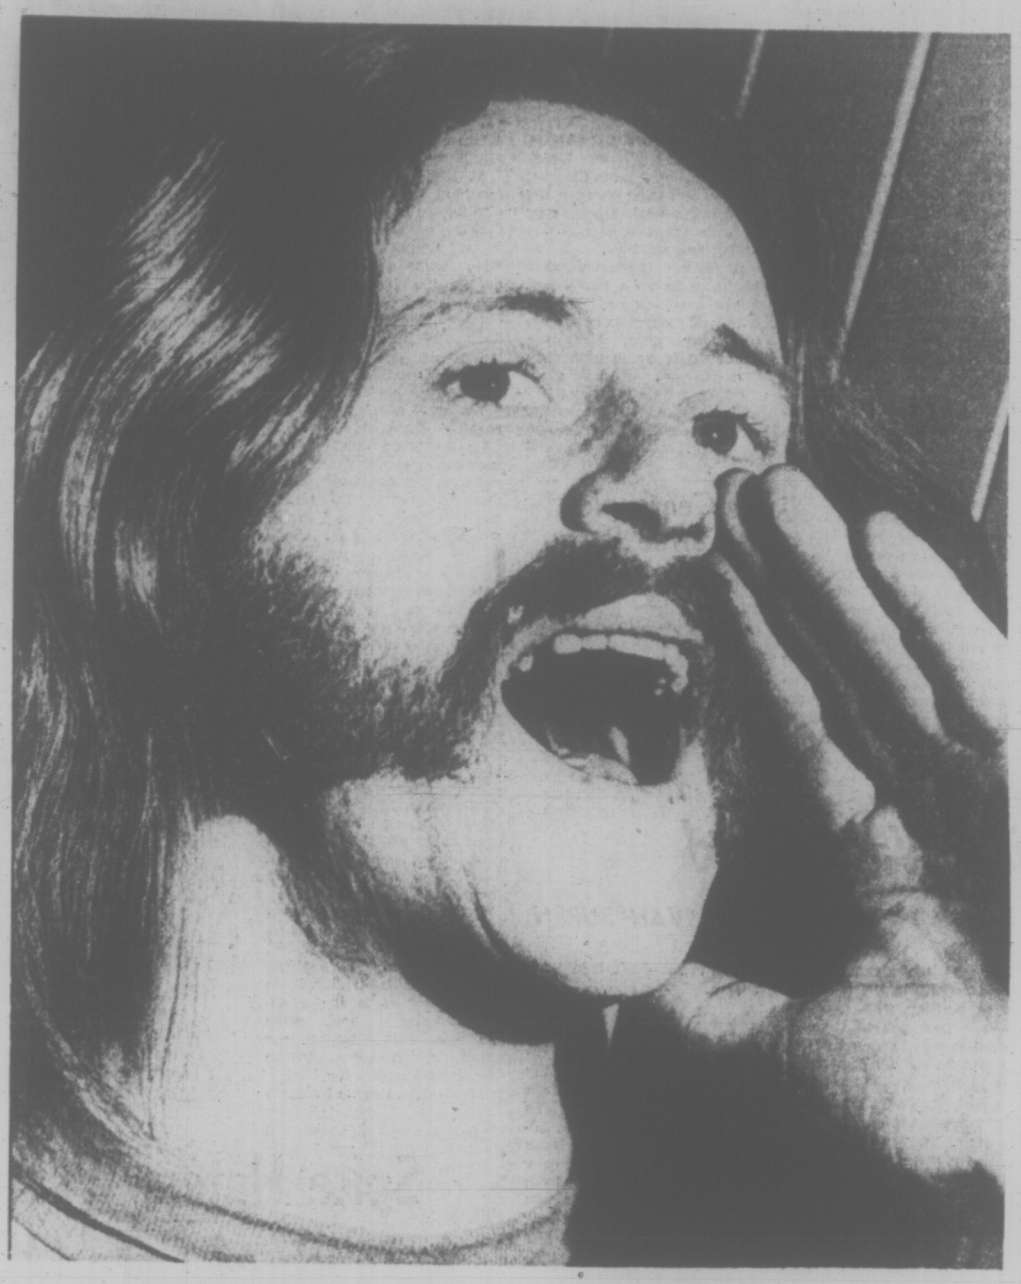
Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, Victoria's senior medical health officer, says the flu bug can be expected to move across on the ferry; but notes that the annual flu increase won't hit Victoria as hard as Vancouver.

* * *

"We're healthier here," said Whitbread, "no doubt because of climatic conditions. We don't have the smog, or the day-in, day-out rain."

Dr. Anthony Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, says the worst time of the year for flu is past, and considers this winter a comparatively good one for influenza outbreaks.

The worst reports in B.C. this winter were from the upper Fraser valley and Trail, where absenteeism rates were running to 20 per cent two weeks ago.



Dennis Scherk: 'Hear Ye . . . Hear Ye . . . I Need a Job'

Uvic Governors Back Partridge

The University of Victoria's board of governors announced Monday full and unanimous support for president Bruce Partridge in the contract and tenure dispute which has disrupted the campus for the past four months.

In an afternoon press release the board said it had "exhaustively considered the various representations made by students, faculty, and members of the public over the past several months."

The release said the board wished to record its "complete confidence in the ability and integrity of President Partridge, and further, to express unanimously its full support of the president."

The statement triggered activity among students, who said in a press release Monday night that the board's statement "cuts off all means of legitimate appeal for the majority of students who oppose the arbitrary actions of the president."

Issued by the steering committee of the Alma Mater Society, the release charges Partridge with attempting to precipitate violence on the campus.

It said Partridge has many times stated he thinks students would like to riot at Uvic.

"We feel that nobody wants one as badly as Bruce Partridge," the release said.

President Trying To Incite Riots Charge Students

Canadian way of resolving disputes with "an alien philosophy of legalism and insensitivity.

"Bruce Partridge brought an American ideology of management to the University of Victoria, and the students in response may be forced to assume the character of their American contemporaries."

But in another release this morning the steering committee strongly rejected violence as an alternative at Uvic.

"The attempt by Partridge to put a lid on what is still a matter of genuine concern to most people in the university will inevitably lead to more vociferous argument and frustration.

"This is the climate in which the irresponsible edict of the president could produce an irresponsible act by an individual.

"We reject both forms of irresponsibility . . ." the release said.

Steering committee member Norman Wright accused the Daily Colonist of "utterly distorting" student aims in a story this morning that said student violence might result from the board's statement.

The Colonist quoted Martlet editor Robert Higinbotham as telling the newspaper he thought there would be violence on campus.

"I was not interviewed by the Colonist," he said this morning.

ON NURSING HOME PROJECT

Contractors Alerted To Watch Their Bids

Higher bids on a proposed $4 million retirement centre in Oak Bay by National Nursing Homes Ltd. could be the end result of a telegram sent today by the International Union of Operating Engineers to the Construction Labor Relations Association.

The telegram, sent by engineers international representative Cliff Parker of Victoria to CLRA president Charles Connaghan of Vancouver, makes no mention of bidding on the proposed development.

But the unspoken implication of the telegram is that, given the possibility of a dispute at the site, contractors and sub-contractors would boost their bids to ensure against a possible loss.

The message simply says the union "views with apprehension" the refusal of National Nursing Homes Ltd., Vancouver, to negotiate with striking employees of Sandringham Private Hospital, 1650 Fort.

90 PATIENTS

National Nursing Homes Ltd. manages Sandringham on behalf of the owners, two Vancouver businessmen. Hospital employees, members of Local 1211 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have been on strike for six months seeking a first contract.

The CLRA represents more than 600 B.C. contractors. The International Union of Operating Engineers is responsible for excavation and servicing of equipment on construction sites.

Oak Bay council approved the retirement centre at a public hearing Dec. 21. It will be built at the corner of Cadboro Bay Road and Bowker Avenue.

MEETING SET

Copies of the telegram were sent to Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, the Amalgamated Construction Association, the B.C. and Yukon Construction Trades Council, Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council, B.C. Federation of Labor and Victoria Labor Council.

Union officials, meanwhile, were to meet Wednesday with Ray Mercer of Vancouver, western director of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, about the Sandringham strike and a picket line incident last week.

Mayor Haddock has promised to look into the incident, in which the police report said Island Security Patrol office reported one of its men "struck a pedestrian in the driveway" of the hospital.

The patrol man, Robert James Wilson, 1037 Wychbury, stopped for pedestrian John R. Reid, 2511 Dowler, then drove forward and "Reid mounted the hood" and travelled about 40 feet, slipping off when the car stopped, the police report said.

The police report concluded "no police action."

Island Security was hired by Sandringham more than a week ago to patrol its property.

Two storage tanks at the Standard Oil depot on Harbor Road, punctured by bullets Thursday night after the company delivered furnace oil to Sandringham, are being repaired.

Fred Moore, assistant manager of the company in Victoria, said the tanks have been drained and are being gaired.

Mrs Margaret Reynolds, administrator of Sandringham, denied the hospital has opened any letters addressed to union officials there. They were returned marked "not here," she said.

NO MORE BOOKS

Monday, Alex Markides, staff representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said Social Credit MLAs had replied to a union letter by addressing them to Sandringham and when the letters were received by the union they were opened. Markides said he is sure the post office didn't open them.

She also said Greater Victoria Public Library has discontinued its shut-in delivery service to the hospital.

Librarian Donald Miller said "as far as I know, the board has made no decision."

Mayor Gags Town Crier Plea

"John Butts" is back, but he's not wanted.

His real name is Dennis Scherk, he's 26, plays in a rock group known as As Sheriff and wants to revive the town crier job John Butts started in 1859. But Mayor Courtney Haddock doesn't go for the idea.

Victoria's first town crier "was fat, incurably lazy, a drunkard, thief, beggar and bootlegger . . . and Victoria loved him," according to newspaper accounts of the day.

It was John Butts duty to announce details of important events. The citizens were amused, but the courts got a bit fed up with his frequent visits.

Dennis Scherk, of 964½ Byng, thinks "it would be fun to spread the news of events that took place 100 years ago" during this year's centennial celebrations. He would also attend official functions and let Victorians know what's going on.

"I didn't have money in mind when I thought of it last October, most of all I needed a part-time job, and I think it would be neat to have a town crier in town," Scherk said.

•

Mayor Haddock said he couldn't support Scherk's proposal, because "town criers are a dead issue to today's society."

Island Work For Students To Be Outlined

Specific projects which may come under Ottawa's $58 million student summer work program will be detailed Wednesday at a meeting to be attended by representatives from conservation and outdoors clubs.

Chairman Alan Meadows said that at a preliminary meeting such projects discussed included stream bank planting, clearing of adjacent trails to West Coast Trail, Environmental 100 staffing, urban beach clean-up, historic site improvements, salmon fry salvage on streams at low water and stump clearing from lakes and streams.

The Wednesday meeting, 7:30 p.m. at the Chief Petty Officers' mess on Esquimalt Road, will outline further these and any other projects, staffing and the availability of supervisors.

Ottawa, in announcing the plan, hoped 400 students will be employed on Vancouver Island for the summer.

Murder Case Reward Totals $400

The final total of rewards handed out for information that helped solve the Mulholland murder comes to $400, a police commission spokesman said today.

Names of the two recipients, who receive $300 and $100, have been withheld.

A total of $2,300 was offered in reward money, but the police commission decided on a smaller amount because the information given did not lead directly to arrest and conviction.

Taxi driver Gerald Mulholland, 37, was slain Nov. 10.

William Albert Larham, 20, and Gary George Smith, 18, both of CFB Esquimalt, were sentenced Jan. 21 to 10-year prison terms.

Province to Put Clamps On Region Park Leasing

Regional districts will be forbidden to lease their parklands for more than five years and will be ordered to prepare regional park plans, Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said Monday.

Kiernan said another provision of the bill allows regional districts to establish "regional trails" on access land to existing regional parks. This eliminates the necessity of regional districts buying access land.

FIVE YEARS

Regional boards will have five years to prepare their park plans. The plans must be approved by the minister and put into bylaw form.

Kiernan said this will prevent haphazard development of regional parks. Some regional districts want to establish parks on Indian reserves, Kiernan said. So the bill has a section allowing parks on leased land provided that the lease is at least 21 years.

Another feature of the bill allows regional board representatives from unorganized areas to sit on parks boards when parks have been created in electoral districts.

The controversial Witty's Lagoon lease to Colwood Trail Riders, he pointed out, was for five years.

He said the emphasis has been on acquisition but there had been a gradual shift — to money in the case of the

"Acquisition should still remain the primary goal but it is reasonalbe for regions to start their planning as we have already," he said.

Fund Honors Lort

Former chief librarian John C. Lort of the Greater Victoria Public Library has been honored by a student loan fund set up at the University of Victoria.

Named the John C. Lort Revolving Loan Fund, it has been established through donations made by the library's staff and members of the public.

$545 DONATED TOWARDS RESCUE BOAT

Donations totalled $545 today as citizens poured cash and cheques into the Percy Brown Trust Fund to provide a rescue vessell for the Beechey Head area.

Brown, who saved two lives when a troller capsized in the area March 13, has bought and launched a 17-foot vessel to be used for rescue work. He borrowed the $4,000 to buy the boat.

Brown, 55, said an antique car collector would make him an offer this afternoon on his Model T Ford, with the money to be added to the fund if the car is sold.

Housing Planned At Pit Area

Development of a major residential complex is being studied for the Ocean Cement Co. gravel pit property on Metchosin Road.

No announcement of plans or details are expected for at least two months, a company spokesman said, but the project would include single family as well as apartment or condominium housing.

Arthur Mayse . . .

BY HAPPY CHANCE.

Teachers Strike Friday ran its course in a veritable sunburst of fine weather. And if anyone wants to know how hundreds of Vancouver Island kids spent their holiday, I can offer a rundown.

With sunshine for company, on bike or on foot, they took to the highway.

Some carried packs and had goals. Others rode, hoofed or thumbed along, footloose and fancy free.

As a traveller cruising our great north road, I can also report that more than a few went fishing on a day made to order for a boy with a rod. We glimpsed young anglers on Colquitz, patiently dunking. Up near Miracle Beach, we were gladdened by the sight of a steelhead, boy-escorted, that had quitted Black Creek a matter of minutes earlier.

For that student and the others, it was an odd sort of holiday. It didn't fit the pattern: It had no place in the scheduled scheme of things, and perhaps for this very reason, it carried a special glow.

It was kind of like sanctioned hookey-playing, unmarred by the prospect of penalties to follow.

The school buses weren't running. Each country school we passed had a closed and empty look.

Outside one little school in Qualicum country, two teachers sat in a parked car. A placard on the side of the car proclaimed in bold black letters, "ON STRIKE."

For these unaccustomed pickets, the occasion was a sesie is one, with much more than the loss of a day's pay involved.

But for their charges who took to the outdoors, it was the sort of break that doesn't come too often in a lifetime. Spring arrived, and a day of unearned, unorthodox, perfectly splendid freedom to spend on it.

*

I know a man who lives in a pocket of wilderness up near the top of the Gulf of Georgia. He has a long, winding, freshwater slough on his property, and he is involved in a form of guerrilla warfare with a colony of clever engineers who are determined to make that slough much bigger.

A narrow woods road crosses the waterway at its lower end. Under this road is a large culvert through which the slough is supposed to drain its excess into a channel that leads to the gulf.

We were strolling the road last Saturday when our host, who seeks to live at peace with nature, came to a sudden halt. He peered up the slough, which appeared to be pretty full, then hopped down to a handy rock by a culvert exit that wasn't releasing much of a flow.

"Damn those beavers!" he grumbled. "They've been at it again. Come and take a look."

Crouched and squinting into the culvert, we saw that it was largely blocked at the slough end by a higgledy-piggledy barricade of sticks and severed branches.

The beavers George damned are out to dam his culvert. He on his part is equally determined that the culvert will stay open. But as fast as he foils their efforts, the beavers get busy and rebuild.

This contest has been seesawing back and forth for quite a while now, and it is plain that neither George nor the flat-tails have any intention of giving up.

But until or unless George calls in reinforcements, I'm betting on that tribe of eager beavers.

To gladden a rainy day, here's a letter on bluelined paper with stars, hearts and flowers crayoned around its borders. It's from a young lady in Grade 1 at George Jay elementary, and a nicer note with neater printing, I've never had.

It goes like this:

"Thank you for telling all the grandmothers and grandfathers who talked with us when we were making butter that we are glad they came.

"I might write a column for a newspaper when I grow up. Maybe I'll see you then.

"Love from Josina."

Paris Revives the Old-Movie Look

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — The Rita Hayworth look! Yes, Paris couturiers have trudged their way back to the 1940s for inspiration which means that hair and makeup styles of the same era also are revived.

The look perhaps is best exemplified by Miss Hayworth, Hollywood's "Love Goddess" who in her heyday had every woman sighing for long waving hair, bright red lips and a figure that helped captivate movie audiences and husbands including Orson Welles and the late Ali Khan.

So maybe the designers have been watching the late, late television shows. For the "new" Paris hair and cosmetics shows also feature long red fingernails, that lip rouging — a dark red spilling over the upper lip — heavily rouged cheeks and long and very curly hair with a just-out-of-bed look.

To show what's "new," the union of French hair stylists staged a show recently to unveil its 1971 creations, dubbed the "1971 Angel," an updated version of the 1939 "Angel." Now that brings up Betty Grable, and if you haven't seen an old film starring Grable, the hair style consists of long frizzy or bubble curls in a halo around the head with a sleek, flat crown like a tiny skull cap.

Twelve models in variations of the "Angel" paraded before the assembled news media. Grable's "Angel" was totally blonde, but the revival is hair colored in two different tones. Some of the mannequins had dark blonde curls frizzed around their heads while the flat crown was a paler blonde.

RITA HAYWORTH

In the courturier shows earlier this season, designer Yves St. Laurent went totally back to the 1940s, with clothes that had some of his critics really sharpening their vocabularies.

Second World War styles, padded shoulders and all, were shown with mannequins wearing bright makeup and long curly hair, also in two tones. One girl had dark brassy red hair with black showing at the part on purpose.

Olivier Borele, spokesman for the hair stylists, conceded that the new coifs were designed to help business of the 60 member-hairdressers from 36 countries including the United States.

The long straight "hippie" hair currently popular is on the way out because too many girls needed nothing more than a shower and a brush to fix their own, he explained. With the "Angel," a woman must go to the beauty salon for a permanent, two-tone color and complicated cut of three different lengths.

Cosmeticians also have been watching the old movies. Several companies based in France have decreed that cheeks be rouged lightly, lips painted sharp red with a pointed "bow" for the upper lip. Eyebrows have been just about plucked out of existence, and eye makeup is quieter to provide balance for the red lips.

Paris insists on long pointed nails in wild red colors. The name for this trend — "Vamp Hands."

Fashion Predicts A Wide Variety Of City Sandals

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

Whether it's the hippie influence, or just the leg interest lingering on from the mini era, sandals are the way to focus attention on legs this spring and summer.

It doesn't matter whether you're wearing a newly soft midi costume, a knicker outfit, an evening dress or the new "city shorts," there is a sandal style to go with each of them.

Of course, the variety offered in sandals means the right choice is up to the wearer. It won't do to accessorize carelessly with sandals any more than with shoes.

At Battani, where sandals are old friends, they are offering city sandals for dresses or skirted separates in a simple back-strapped style with a broad strap across the instep and one across the toe. It's set on a chunky stacked wood heel, and the instep strap is unobtrusively buckled. This kind of sandal look is what fashion people are calling "civilized," meant to go with a softly pleated skirt.

On the other hand, Battani sees any style of short pants worn with a sandal which rises to meet it. The sandal has one broad strap, from which lacings run up nearly to the knee, obviously for gauchos or knickers. If you've tried laced sandals and found that they slip, be advised that Battani's have stretch lacing which clings nitely to the leg.

For shorts there are even higher versions, particularly from Italian sandal designers, who started the whole new cycle for sandals. In nail-head studded leather, in white and in endless combinations of pastels, their sandals feature ankle-straps, closed toes with open backs, closed backs with open toes, straps that cross each other, lean to one side, look open here and solid there.

Heels are always ornamental in the new sandals, whether from contrast color, odd shape or contrast material. Much liked in Italian sandals is the transparent plastic heel, often decorated with a butterfly or flower which seems to be imprisoned within the heel.

(A Fashion League Feature)

Civilized sandals for city wear will be a popular accessory this summer. These high-rise sandals by Battani have a chunky heel and a back column of leather. Stretch lacings stay up. The knicker outfit is accented by a broad leather belt created by Battani.

Mrs. Glen H. Coffey is convener of the event which will feature door prizes, a raffle and a bake stall.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Advice Was Sound

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This letter is two years overdue, but nonetheless sincere. When I was a sophomore in college I wrote you a letter with tears dropping all over it. I had just found out for sure I was pregnant by the boy I'd gone with since high school. He was also in college. We were really in love, and even though my parents approved of him, I just couldn't see myself telling them that their daughter, whom they considered such a "good girl," was pregnant. I considered suicide, abortion. Then I wrote you, asking for advice, and I will never forget your words:

"Honey, tell your parents at once. They are your best friends. I promise you they will understand and help you. Forget the abortion. You could end up in the hands of some butcher who may do such a poor job that you'll never be able to have a child. Good doctors don't perform illegal abortions for a living."

I took your advice and told my parents. Abby, you were so right. They were wonderfull! We were married right away, and now we have the most beautiful baby in the world. My husband will graduate from college in June. I'll graduate six months later. How much do I owe you?—Happy I Wrote.

DEAR HAPPY: Not a thing. You've just repaid me.

DEAR ABBY: Would you care to speculate on how a man can "lose" his wedding ring on the average of once a year?

My husband and I have been married for six years, and he has lost six wedding rings.

When he lost the first one, I quickly replaced it with another which he lost in six months. He claims he never takes his ring off, but if that is the case, I can't understand how he loses it. I buy the ring to fit his finger and it isn't even loose enough to twist around, so it certainly can't fall off, can it?

I don't want to believe that he actually takes off his wedding ring when I'm not with him to give the impression that he isn't married, but what else am I to think? He claims he enjoys wearing a wedding ring. If you were me, would you buy him a seventh? —Suspicious.

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: If I were you, I would not have bought him a fourth! If he really "enjoys" wearing a wedding ring, he'll buy one himself. But don't hold your breath.

DEAR ABBY: It is obvious that your man has other hobbies besides TV football, because your answer to Sunday Widow shows a complete lack of understanding for this growing national sickness. Addiction to TV football is as much a "cop out" as the drug scene — a total escape from communication. It's not just Sunday, it's all weekend long and Monday nights.

Our husbands have no time to be creative; they have forgotten how to read; the beauty of nature bores them; they don't know the theatre, museums or the symphony exist. They have let their bodies become as flabby as their minds.

If you think a wife, while her lifetime companion ignores her, can spend her weekends cleaning closets and drawers without building up sufficient resentment to destroy a marriage, you don't understand women.—"T"

Dear ABBY: "Santa Ana" says that dogs have no souls. How does she know? Our family has had a dog for 14 years. He has fallen victim to our anger, but is always quick to forgive and he never bears a grudge. His devotion and loyalty is unsurpassed. I thing our dog has the most beautiful soul of anyone in our family.—Bloomington.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Spice Haters Will Discover A Touch of Curry Adds Flavor

By HILDA BEASTALL

Curry and rice go together as naturally as bacon and eggs. When the rice is brown, and cheese is part of the dish, you have a meal that gives many hours of energy.

Curry can be used more as a delicate flavoring than as a hot spice.

I find that a few grains are acceptable to those people who normally do not partake of food which is frankly curried.

So the amount in this recipe can be increased or decreased according to your own preference, but do add a little curry, even one-eighth of a teaspoon.

Have ready three cups of hot brown rice cooked with salt. Make a sauce of 1 cup medium Canadian cheddar cheese, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup water saved from vegetable cooking, 1 teaspoon of wholewheat flour, a little salt and about one-eighth teaspoon curry.

Arrange the hot rice in a circle on a heated green or yellow serving plate or shallow bowl, garnish with chopped chives and parsley (both are growing well again now in the garden) and heap the cheese sauce in the centre.

Serve hot, with thick slices of home-made wholewheat bread.

Kedgeree has been to me just a word connected in some way with fish, but I never quite knew why. When first used in 1625, the word "kedgeree" from the Hindustani language referred to a "dish of rice and sesame."

Apparently European cooks introduced the fish. Now the dish may be composed of cooked cod, fresh or canned salmon, or even kippers; but always with rice and seasonings.

So take your choice when Kedgeree. A portion of cooked fish left over from the previous day's meal will be fine. Remove all bones and break the fish into flakes.

Cook a cuptul of long-grain brown rice; it holds its shape and remains separated into grains whereas short-grain rice tends to stick together when cooked.

Heat a tablespoon of margarine or oil in a fry pan or skillet. Add and stir in a small onion chopped or sliced thinly; cook until the onion is golden. Season with salt and black pepper plus one-quarter teaspoon of curry powder, then stir in as much of the cooked rice as required for the number of servings.

Variations on this theme at once come to mind, but basically kedgeree seems to be a top-of-stove recipe. Hard-boiled eggs were mentioned in two out of the three recipes investigated, so they seem at least as traditional as the fish, rice and curry.

None of the recipes used the sesame seeds which were a part of the original Hindustani word kedgeree; a half-teaspoon of the seeds added to the mixture with the rice would add a delicate oil flavor.

Since the mixture is heated but not brought to the boil the flavor will not be destroyed.

These two curry and rice recipes are useful for hot, nutritious and economical lunches, main course dinners or suppers.

The quantity of brown rice can be increased sufficiently to provide the main protein, the fish and eggs will supplement that protein. Add all the vegetables you like, some cooked, some raw, and you have complete meals for healthy appetites.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Sink to Senate Is a Long Step For Any Woman

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — At a private meeting of the national executive of the Liberal Party, before the last general election, the provincial chieftains were reporting on the candidates being adopted in the ridings, and several commented regretfully on the lack of women seeking seats in parliament.

Vice-President Pauline Jewett, a political scientist and outspoken former MP, listened quietly to the regrets and then suggested that if the men were really so concerned, perhaps the party should set itself a target of finding and adopting 50 women candidates. There was a short eloquent silence and the meeting moved on to next business.

When the election came around, there was one Liberal woman candidate, Margaret Rideout in New Brunswick, and she lost the seat which she originally inherited from her husband.

Flora MacDonald, a former organizer and national secretary of the Conservative party and now on leave from Queen's University to run the Committee for an Independent Canada, is one of the best known political activists in Canada. The royal commission engaged her as a consultant on women in public life.

Interviewed recently by a leading newspaper, she argued vigorously that women are so far behind men in politics and government that they need special help — something better than equality in the short term — to break through to the prominent positions in which they can prove their competence and get men used to their presence. So the newspaper ran her views in the pages reserved for women.

That was adding insult to the injury of the fact that the royal commission was unwilling to go along with Miss MacDonald in her plea for equality-plus for women who have long had far less than equality.

To talk to women such as Miss Jewett and Miss MacDonald who have had experience in the man's world of politics, to read the sour memoirs of Judy LaMarsh, probably the most successful woman politician in Canadian history, is to understand why they regard with suspicion the talk of a new era for women in Ottawa. The statistics of past experience are too depressing to permit much optimism.

In 134 federal and provincial elections from 1917 to 1970, 6,845 persons were elected. Just 67 were women.

Sacrificial Lambs

In the 15 federal elections since 1921, when women became free to vote, there have been 12,262 candidates. Just 300 have been women, and many of those were sacrificial lambs put up by the parties to run in ridings where they had no chance — a Liberal woman against John Diefenbaker in Prince Albert in 1965, for example, and a Tory woman against Pierre Trudeau in Mount Royal in 1968.

In the past half-century, only 18 women have been elected to the Commons. Seven of these took over seats originally won by fathers or husbands.

There is only one woman in the present House, Grace MacInnis, a New Democrat from British Columbia, member of a famous political family and an outstanding member.

The story of the Senate is even worse. As late as 1928, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that women could not qualify under the law as "persons" entitled to sit in the Upper House. The judicial committee of the Privy Council in Britain overturned that curious verdict, on appeal, and said that women were indeed persons able to take a place in the Senate. Even so, successive prime ministers have been reluctant to appoint women.

In the federal civil service, there is not a single woman at deputy minister rank heading one of the great departments of state, and there is less than a handful at assistant deputy level.

When the politicians — men, of course — set out to try to improve this dismal record, they often encounter discouraging resistance. Prime Minister Lester Pearson was widely criticized for appointing the Commission on the Status of Women, and when Trudeau chose to speak on women's rights at a Liberal dinner in Toronto recently, he anticipated the lack of audience enthusiasm and wrote into his text: "Who of you at this moment are saying to yourselves, 'Women? Why doesn't he speak on an important subject'."

Actions Speak Louder

Many in the fashionable audience were saying just that the speech was said to be a bore and a disappointment but there were others who thought that the prime minister, for all his good intentions, was objectionably patronizing to women.

He suggested that women in public life—would be more compassionate than men, more alert to the problems of consumers, less influenced by technology — a man's view of women as the softer sex concerned with homely problems.

Trudeau's actions, however, are preferable to his words. As head of government, he has:

- Made it deliberate policy to seek out and appoint more women to public positions, most noticeably last October when he sent two women to the Senate. More such appointments can be expected, and a hunt is on for women qualified to sit as judges in the highest courts.
- Told his program planners that measures to improve the status of women must have a high place on the government's schedule of priorities, the all important list of the things must be done in the limited time available.
- Appointed social scientist Freda Paltiel to the privy council offices a broad mandate to guide the government in implementing the royal commission report and going beyond that to other action required to improve the position of women.

As leader of the Liberal party, Trudeau has put his personal authority behind the campaign to persuade constituency organizations to nominate women as candidates. He has also endorsed the appointment of a three-women task force which will survey the opinions and wishes of the liberal membership across the country on women's rights and carry the advice to cabinet.

Few Women Qualify

Inside the Liberal organization, there is a special committee to study development of women's participation. The party president, Senator Richard Standbury, said this week that one of the early tasks is to survey the situation in each constitency to discover where to stand for nomination.

Liberal policy chairman Al Linden a Toronto law professor adds that it is not just a matter of seeking openings but also of finding qualified women.

"You cannot just take a woman away, from washing dishes and throw her into parliament", he says. "You cannot take her away from washing diapers and make her head of a commission." There are not many women who have the qualifications and experience to be judges, and some women who are qualified for public life have problems overcoming their own inhibitions.

Linden thinks it will take 40 or 50 years in practice to raise women to equality with men in public life.

Trudeau says: "We should be guilty of intellectual dishonesty if we underestimate the weight of tradition or the depth of bias in both conscious and unconscious — which permeats each of us. There can be no expectation that any of us, men or women, can overcome these attitudes in a period of months or even years."

While these may be realistic assessments by past standards of evolution, they are not likely to satisfy today's revolutionary expectations. The demand is for solutions now, rather than for the next generation. The only way to meet this sort of expectation is to force the rate of progress, perhaps by setting reserved quotas for women in the political and public service.

Toronto yoga student, Janet Hunter, perches in mid-air during an exercise session at a YMCA class. Many people turn to yoga as an easy way to get back in shape and reap the benefits of learning to relax.

Yoga Students Replace Anger With Relaxation

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Try to imagine a thin foam mat on a bare floor becoming the surface of a beautiful lake, the waves rocking gently. Behind closed eyes in a bare, darkened exercise room, imagine warm sunshine beginning to glow.

"You are feeling the invisible force you can trust, feeling how much you are part of the cosmos. You are the cosmos, filling your heart with joy. Relax, just relax."

That lesson is one of the reasons yoga is booming. Adelinde Ostermann says she teaches 250 students a week now, in gymnasiums, schools, libraries and community centres.

"Yoga has increased in the Western world because we feel our lives have become suicidal. The stresses, fear, anxiety, boredom, have become killer Number One.

"If you are relaxed, you cannot be angry. Yoga helps you to control emotion, not to suppress it — that is a different thing. It helps you to control it."

Mrs. Ostermann talks confidently of her own belief in the benefits of yoga. She doesn't seem to mind that her pupils want less of it than she thinks it has to offer. Her motto might be that a little yoga is better than none.

In its highest—spiritual—form, yoga aims at uniting man—the finite with the infinite through concentration and self-realization. Its heights take years to achieve.

In its less-exalted stages it is exercise, which is another reason for its popularity. It is exercise, Mrs. Ostermann says, at your own pace, in competition with no one. It can be as simple as a good stretch or as complicated as an acrobat's turn.

"It starts strictly at the physical level. Some take it only for its physical aspect, to lose three inches off the waistline. But, unknowingly, it takes you beyond that. Out of physical well-being comes a better mental attitude.

"Yoga means union, harmonizing. It teaches concentration and mind control, bringing mind and body back together."

She says it is also attracting some of the people who are looking for something to believe in.

"It is also spiritual. There is a tremendous longing for spiritual guidance in all of us."

Mrs. Ostermann says her own interest started 12 years ago when she was told she had arthritis of the spine. She says she now believes her illness was psychosomatic.

At the time she refused an operation because she felt she could not undergo it and continue to look after her then-small son. She is a widow who worked as a nurse until two years ago when teaching yoga became a full-time occupation.

She went to a chiropractor, and through him was introduced to yoga.

"I took it for physical reasons, and my back has improved tremendously."

After a cancer operation about five years ago, she says, she became interested in the mental and mind-control aspects of yoga, though she says she has not attained its spiritual levels.

Abstemiousness is part of yoga, and Mrs. Ostermann says she now is a vegetarian who fasts once a week, but she does not push that aspect of the discipline at her classes.

She does teach anatomy in a special way, and encourages her students to "listen to your bodies."

"With this exercise the kidney, liver and spleen get a good squeeze, and they need it . . . . Stress is unfinished business, but we have forgotten to listen to the body."

In one class there were 11 women — couple in their 60s, three or four more in their 40s and 50s, most in their 30s.

They all ran through the basic exercises in their fourth lesson more or less successfully.

"There is no age limit. If a muscle is stretched gently, you can feel its limit."

Mrs. Ostermann is in her 50s, and several of the class said afterward they admire her vitality and build.

One woman said she was there out of curiosity, because there is so much talk about yoga. Another said it is better than the stretch-and-groan school of exercise.

Allende Works for Women

SANTIAGO (AP) — Women in Chile have not reached the point of demonstrations in behalf of equality, but if they do they will have an important backer in their corner.

Hortensia Bussi de Allende, the wife of Chile's president, wants women to have equality in salaries, job opportunities and legal status. And she says her husband, President Salvador Allende seeks the same goals. The women's vote played a big part in his election last year.

By law, the husbands of Chile are absolute monarchs in their households. A married woman, for example, cannot enter into a legal contract, maintain a bank account of her own or even accept inheritance without hubby's permission.

Unless she spells it out in a pre-marital contract, Hubby has the right to administer her personal estate and can require her to follow him wherever he chooses to live. He can even get a court order to make her quit her job.

In Mrs. Allende's view, this is the result of a "concept called machismo (manliness), which means the woman should always be in the house while the man is away — wherever he wants to be."

Women outnumber men by 1.3 per cent in Chile's population of 9.3 million. They make up around a quarter of the working force — but mainly as maids, clerks, secretaries and factory workers. Most of Chile's 240,000 housemaids earn less than $35 a month.

"There are few judges, few legislators even though women are capable of filling any post," Mrs. Allende says.

Even so, some people say the women in Chile are better off than many of their Latin-American sisters — because discrimination is not so rough against females in this country.

Gabriela Mistral, a poet, was Chile's only Nobel Prizewinner. A woman held a cabinet post briefly in 1946. In the present Congress, two of the 50 senators and nine out of the 150 deputies are female.

But, Mrs. Allende argues, "the custom is for the woman to have a passive role."

Abortions are illegal in Chile. There is no divorce, although there is a cheap way for the man-king to leave his crumbling palace by means of separations and annulments. That, however, means second-time bachelors need not bother with alimony.

Some past attempts to change all this met with strong but muted male resistance.

Last June Allende's predecessor, Eduardo Frei, sent Congress a bill to give married women equal rights. A Senate committee is talking it to death. Other women's rights bills met the same fate.

Allende plans a package of legislation to cover everything from divorce to family planning.

Beefeater Ranks Open to Women

LONDON (AP) — Ladies, you too may become a Beefeater in the Tower of London, where ladies of the past used to lose their heads.

This prospect arises from legislation on sex equality now before the House of Commons.

Peter Walker, secretary of environment, answered a member's question by saying that women who qualified would not be excluded from becoming a Yeoman of the Guard, the gaily caparisoned pikemen who by tradition have been royal attendants since the 15th century.

Should it ever happen, they'd probably have to coin a word . . . yeowomen.

Belson, 21 years at the Tower and a former sergeant major, is one of the complement of 34 Beefeaters and has a special honor of carrying the axe in formal ceremonies to remind all and sundry that this was the busiest weapon in the old days inside Traitor's Gate.

To become a Yeoman of the Guard one must have a long service record in the armed forces up to the rank of non-commissioned officer, plus a good-conduct medal.

"So you're not a youngster when you get here," Benson commented. "Any lady yeoman would not exactly look like the British entry in the Miss World contest."

There are a limited number of senior women NCOs in the army and air force, but, of course, at such an early stage none has applied.

While there are no specific bars to the job, a literal interpretation of the guard's makeup would raise some more barriers. Yeomen are basically defined as men just just below the rank of gentry, with big build and a sort of countrified appearance, from whence comes the Beefeater tag. Tough old veterans, they look like they've spent a lifetime tearing rib roats apart. A yeowoman thus might be a terrifying prospect indeed.

Russian Pilots to Fly Fast Jetliner This Year

By ANTHONY ASTRACHAN

MOSCOW (WP) — Soviet pilots "will start mastering" the Tupolev-144 supersonic transport this year, according to the Soviet minister of civil aviation.

The TU-144 thus appears closer to production and use than either of its troubled Western competitors, the Anglo-French Concorde or the American SST.

But no date has been publicly set for the Soviet plane to start service. In 1968, Soviet officials predicted a start of March, 1970. In 1969, they put the date at early 1973. A year ago they put it at 1975. Nothing has been heard since on an official basis.

Moscow observers are almost unanimous that the TU-144 will solve neither the ecological nor the economic problems plaguing the Western supersonic transports.

They feel that those factors, combined with traditional Soviet marketing disabilities, will prevent the U.S.S.R. from selling many TU-144s to Western airlines.

Warnings of possible U.S. sales from American aviation officials appear from here to be part of the lobbying effort for congressional approval of the Boeing SST rather than prudent conclusions drawn from available facts.

It is true that Aviaexport, the Soviet organization for selling aircraft abroad, has been advertising the TU-144 in such publications as Aviation Week and Jane's Directory of World Aircraft.

Moscow observers find three probable motivations for this: Wishful thinking for actual sales; a desire to build Soviet prestige when Western manufacturers cannot yet advertise supersonic transports; and a desire to fuel the American lobbying effort for the SST.

The last reflects the fact that the Soviet aircraft industry has no guarantee of the precise dimensions of its slice of the resource pie. If the U.S. Congress appropriates more money for the SST, Soviet aircraft makers can turn to the Kremlin and say, in effect, "You have to give us the rubles to finish the TU-144 because the Americans are going ahead."

Efforts of the kind made on behalf of the SST by men like Najeeb Halaby of Pan American Airways and astronaut Neil Armstrong are known to be used by their Soviet equivalents in the Kremlin's internal lobbying.

So far as the ecological problem goes, the Soviets have made public no facts about the TU-144's sonic boom except for statements by a test pilot and test-flight passengers that they could not hear it.

The U.S.S.R. is much less pollution-conscious than the west. Both its pollution and its relatively feeble efforts to solve pollution problems are concentrated more on water than on air. In Soviet society, citizens are not allowed to organize pressure groups against Kremlin-approved projects like the TU-144 of the kind that encouraged the U.S. Senate to stop funds for the SST last year.

The sonic-boom problem is smaller here than in the west because the Soviet Union is sparsely populated, compared to the United States and western Europe. Aeroflot could conceivably route planes around urban areas and minimize the effect of booms more thoroughly than is possible in the west.

The TU-144 will carry up to 120 passengers in rows of three seats on one side and two on the other, compared to 128 to 144 in pairs of seats on the Concorde.

The Boeing SST, which will carry 300 passengers if it is ever built, is not comparable.

The maximum rated speed of the TU-144 is 1,350 mph at 65,000 feet; the maximum it has been reported as reaching was 1,458 mph at 51,000 feet in a test last Nov. 12. The Concorde is rated at 1,450 mph at 54,000 feet.

The TU-144 will have a range of 4,040 miles compared to 3,600 for the Concorde.

Both planes have bent noses like a bird's beak — the Tupolev slightly more so. Alexei Tupolev said this was to maximize the cockpit field of vision while eliminating the traditional "canopy" to reduce drag.

•

The performance of the TU-144 is unknown except in the most general terms. Its chief test pilot, Eduard Yelyan, said the plane was a great success and "much easier to control than subsonic aircraft."

Yelyan added that all flight characteristics had "proved better than the designed ones." He said the plane generated less noise than a conventional jet inside the passenger cabin.

Labor-Business Lobby May Save SST Program

WASHINGTON (WP) — Thanks to a heavy labor-business lobbying campaign for the SST, U.S. Senate backers of the plane have a good chance of rescuing it in Wednesday's floor vote. But opponents led by Sen. William Proxmire (D—Wis.) still have a slight edge.

The House has already voted to cut off federal funds for the supersonic transport project, and it can be saved only if the Senate approves the money. A survey by the Washington Post gives opponents of the plane a 47-to-45 margin right now, with two others expected to be absent because of illness.

Thus the decision on whether the plane will be sent to oblivion by the Senate Wednesday lies in the hands of six senators whose positions are still unknown:

AGAINST PLANE

Hubert Humphrey (D—Minn.), Stuart Symington (D—Mo.), Joseph Montoya (D—N.M.), Margaret Chase Smith (R—Maine), Peter Dominick (R—Colo.) and James Buckley (Conserv.-Rep.—N.Y.)

Symington, Montoya, Dominick and Mrs. Smith all voted against the plane last year, as did the predecessors of Humphrey and Buckley.

Neither Symington nor Humphrey will say which way he is "leaning," but many Senate sources believe they'll support the plane. Dominick said he is thinking of switching to support because some of the noise problems appear to have been solved, but he insisted he hasn't made up his mind.

Buckley, who was highly critical of the project during his campaign last November, apparently has been looking for a compromise to ease his decision, but none has been put forward so far.

CONCERNED ABOUT JOBS

Montoya has a big General Electric factory in his state and conceivably may be concerned about employment in his state. (GE builds the SST motors.) Mrs. Smith has given no indication that she's changing her position, but traditionally refuses to reveal her vote in advance.

Backers of the plane, which is strongly supported by the administration, could still save it in the Senate if they could pick up four of the six undecideds. That would give them a 49 to 49 tie and enable Vice-President Agnew, as presiding officer of the Senate, to cast a tie-breaking vote in favor of the plane.

KEY FACTOR

The improvement of the SST's prospects in the Senate stems from labor-business lobbying over the past month and the election of a handful of Conservative senators in place of liberals last November.

The campaign being mounted by organized labor — sparked by the AFL-CIO and International Association of Machinists, which has 300,000 of its members in the aerospace industry — and a battery of aerospace firms is also believed to be a key factor.

"The AFL-CIO, that's the difference," said an aide to one of the senators leading the drive to save the plane. "The aerospace industry isn't worth a spit in lobbying."

He estimated that without the labor lobbying effort, the SST would have lost by 20 Senate votes Wednesday, instead of having a real chance of winning.

Ban on Hunting Sought by Grit

A major public education program aimed at eliminating hunting as a sport in B.C. was urged in the legislature Monday by Liberal Leader Pat McGeer.

He spoke after Opposition Leader Dave Barrett called for more stringent regulation of firearms during debate on amendments to the Wildlife Act.

The bill will create a new class of firearms licence for recreational shooters who are not hunters.

"We cannot go too far in limiting firearms," McGeer said, calling for a public education program to eliminate hunting.

"I can see nothing but harm coming from the promiscuous use of firearms," he added, referring to "senseless carnage" both by hunters and by unbalanced persons who take lives with unregistered guns.

Barrett said he would like to see all rifles registered with registration and examination of gun use ability at time of purchase or as close to it as possible.

Transfer of guns should also be registered in the same way as cars are registered by new owners, he said.

A ban on firearms advertising should also be considered, he said.

Barrett said the public would accept far more stringent regulation of guns than is proposed in the bill.

Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malhat) said hunting serves a useful purpose both for maintaining the balance of nature and the balance of many people.

"Some people require this as an outlet to maintain their balance," he said. It is better to have guns used in hunting "rather than against some other society."

Kiernan said there were 70,000 deer and 25,000 moose killed by hunters last year and this helped to control their populations.

Barrett Thwarted On Cypress Question

A bill enabling expenditure of $15 million on park development received final approval in the legislature on Monday after Opposition Leader Dave Barrett was ruled out of order in an effort to discuss Cypress Bowl.

After being gavelled down as "out of order" several times by Deputy Speaker Herb Bruch, Barrett finally said:

"I'm saying Cypress Bowl is not in order and it is going to take a lot of money to clean it up."

Barrett repeated earlier charges that from $250,000 to $400,000 in trees was "stolen" by promoters of a recreational project in the bowl which was finally taken over by the government.

The money went out of the country, Barrett said.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Barrett's remarks were irrelevant to the discussion but Barrett disagreed, saying the government had announced that its proposed development of the bowl would take a large share of the $15 million.

The government's Special Funds Appropriations Act, including $25 million for a perpetual drug, alcohol and cigarette education fund, received final approval after Premier Bennett told Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) that an advisory committee will study allocation of the funds created by the $25 million.

Letter Threat Arrest Made

LA SCIE, Nfld. (CP) — A youth was arrested here Monday night following an RCMP investigation into a threatening letter sent to Newfoundland Premier Joseph Smallwood during the FLQ crisis last fall.

Police said the letter was signed "FLQ".

The youth, 20, will appear in court in Gander, 200 miles south of here, but RCMP have not set a date nor said what charges will be laid.

Dragged to Safety

MELBOURNE: Australia (Reuter) — Police and firemen dragged 29 fainting women from a gas-filled factory Monday in a Melbourne suburb. The gas came from a chemical leak at a big hosiery factory. Police reported no one was seriously hurt.

ANDERSON ON OIL:

Environment Policy Needed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Liberal member of Parliament said Monday night Canada needs legislation similar to the United States' national environmental policy act to provide public information on projects that could cause ecological disaster.

David Anderson, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, told a dinner at the University of British Columbia that Canada is "in a comparatively poor position to the U.S." in this field.

He said it now seems possible that the National Energy Board will carry out ecological studies on the suitability of the Mackenzie Valley route as an alternative to shipping U.S. oil in huge tankers from Alaska to a refinery just south of the B.C. border.

However, he added:

"This board is not well suited to dealing with ecological problems."

Anderson said the board is not independent enough and has no direct responsibility to the new ministry of environment to be headed by fisheries minister Jack Davis.

"The tendency will be for the board at upper levels not to be ecologically sympathetic. Even with all the best will in the world, ecological consideration will be wiped out at the lower levels."

Alcohol Revenue $341 M

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal revenue from liquor, beer and wine was at least $341,076,594 in 1970, the Commons was told Monday.

That doesn't count the general sales tax applied to their sale, Revenue Minister Herb Gray said in a written Commons reply to questions by Barry Mather (NDP — Surrey).

Kown Ottawa refenue on spirits totalled $146,343,646; on beer $139,353,060 and on wine $6,990,586.

'GOVERNMENT KNEW RISK'

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government knew the risk it ran when it hired Alex Bandy to organize low-income gorups in Vancouver, the Commons was told Monday night.

Barney Danson, parliamentary assistant to Prime Minister Trudeau, said in an adjournment debate that the government took the risk in the hope it would create more contact between the government and the poor.

Bandy, he said, misunderstood the job he was hired to do and had "thrown the job in Ottawa's face."

Intruders Beat Patient—Nurse

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver nurse said Monday in British Columbia Supreme Court that she was treating a head wound for Nick Cimmarusti at St. Paul's Hospital last Sept. 2 when he was "dragged" from the operating table and beaten by two intruders.

The jury of 10 men and two women was told Cimmarusti had gove to hospital for treatment of head wounds and a cut hand after a fight with the Ceklay brothers at a nightclub where he worked.

Miss Martin said the intruders — whom she identified as the two Ceklays — pushed Cimarusti through the surgery room door and continued to punch and beat him as they moved down the hall.

She testified that when Cimmarusti fell to the floor he was kicked "really hard," with Daniel Ceklay doing most of the kicking.

Delores Mossman, admitting clerk on duty on the night of the incident, said she saw the patient beaten and kicked in the hall by two men she identified as the Ceklay brothers.

John Mault, doorman and maitre d'hotel at the nightspot, said that after two separate altercations at the club the Ceklay brothers had asked him where Cimmarusti was and he told them the bouncer had gone to hospital.

The trial continues.

Chou Meets Russians

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai had a meeting with Soviet Ambassador Vasili Tolstikov and Deputy Foreign Minister Leonid Ilyichov, Tass news agency reported. The presence of Ilyichov, who heads the Soviet side at the Sino-Soviet border talks, was seen here as an indication these were raised.

OKANAGAN INSPECTOR WARNS OF POLLUTION

PENTICTON (CP) — Mercury pollution in the Okanagan may prove an impossible problem, Fred Alcock, the South Okanagan's chief health inspector, said Monday.

Alcock said large fish are already over the federal limit for mercury and fishermen have been waned not to eat three-pound or larger fish because of the pesticide contamination found in the lake in 1969 and 1970.

Further sampling is being done this week to try to determine mercury effects on smaller fish.

HOME GARDEN

Green Thumb Is In Thing

By HILDA BEASTALL

Ten years ago we wondered where the home gardeners of the 1970's were hiding — replacements for those inevitably dropping out. Fw 20-year-olds at that time showed even a remote interest in anything that grew. Today the story is different, and once again we have hopes of passing on some of the experience accumulated by gardeners here for 75 of British Columbia's 100 years.

Hilda

Young folks have been showing their concern in growing some of their own food requirements, partially to be able to live within a reasonable food budget but increasingly because they began to question the value of vegetables and fruits harvested at distant points and shipped in huge quantities to distributing centres before being displayed in stores for consumer sales.

Young people are taking short courses on gardening, they are reading garden columns, and they are asking questions.

To all of these we say welcome.

Grow two or three kinds of vegetables this year if your space is restricted. Make copious notes on what you sow and plant, and on all conditions affecting the plants, and record in detail the results obtained.

While you may make a start, with vegetables only, I know your enthusiasm, energy and love of beauty will soon spill over to include purely ornamental plants too.

A love of beauty combined with utility will have you planting a shade tree to give a portion of the garden dappled light and shade during hot summer months. And a place where friends will gather for coffee and discussions will soon be part of the plans.

We know many young people are foregoing the use of cars. They are more than likely to return to tennis, badminton or croquet on their own property. Some of the handcraft hobbies can be worked at outdoors with a firm bench and a sturdy table. Both will serve dual purposes for meals and work.

At present the chief interest of young gardeners is in vegetable and herb growing. With these two branches of gardening once again firmly entrenched, a revival of interest in home cooking follows.

What better month than March to get started on this project? The wonder months of April and May will see everything you plant grow. By that time you will know how to care for them while they progress, and you'll get the sweet taste of success in young carrots, onions and herbs.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

It is an accepted fact that games made by deception count exactly as much as games made by brute force or by brilliant technical execution. And, conversely, from the defenders' seats, subterfuge that leads to a declarer's defeat scores the same "A" for proficiency as does brilliant defensive play.

In today's deal, our East defender made an excellent deceptive play which, against an expert declarer, would probably have accomplished its objective. But a nonexpert happened to be the declarer, and East's play was wasted. The theme of this deal might perhaps be stated, in the words of the late Joe Penner: "You can't fool me. I'm too ignorant."

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

South's opening one no-trump with but two little clubs in his hand might well be viewed with disapproval. The fact is, however, that he did bid one no-trump.

West's jack of diamonds lead was covered by dummy's queen and taken by East's ace. A diamond was returned, South put up the eight, and West won the trick with his 10. A low diamond lead came next, South capturing the trick with his nine-spot. South now led his deuce of clubs, and inserted dummy's queen. East, without undue haste or undue deliberation played the five-spot!

An expert South declarer might well have suspected what was going on, namely that East possessed the club king, and that he wasn't taking it because to do so would result in the establishment of the board's club suit. Nevertheless, our expert would really have no choice but to return to his hand via a heart, to take another finesse in clubs.

A nonexpert player, on the other hand, would probably feel elated when the queen won the trick; and with complete — perhaps naive — confidence, he would finesse again. It would come as both a surprise and a shock to him when East would capture the trick with the king.

Into what classification our actual declarer would fall, I do not know. Perhaps he was a genius. At any rate, when the queen of clubs won the first club lead, declarer promptly laid down dummy's ace of clubs . . . Oh, lovely day!

Teachers Object

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Teachers' Association purchased an advertisement in Monday's edition of the morning newspaper to explain the teachers' position in a contract dispute with the public school board.

The advertisement says the teachers care about students "but a 50-hour week just isn't practical."

A conciliation board recommended last month that teachers spend 25 hours a week in the classroom with another eight hours a week for supervision, extra-curricular activities, meetings and in-service sessions.

The association says a survey it conducted in 1964 shows such an arrangement would amount to a 50-hour week.

BIG FISH HOT ON THEIR CUPS

LONDON (UPI) — Fishermen along the Kent coast have complained to the department of environment that plastic cups thrown overboard from ships in the English Channel are killing fish.

They say large fish, especially cod, are swallowing the cups and choking to death, and the situation is endangering their livelihood.

8 IN MEMORIAM

JOHNNY WYSE—Meriel Johnny and Patricia Wyse, who passed away March 22, 1936.
We are sad within our memory,
Lonely are our hearts today;
For the ones we loved so dearly
Has forever been called away.
We think of them in silence
No eye may see us weep,
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

CABLEVISION 10 PROGRAMS. 7 p.m., Ladies First; 7:30 p.m., Project Travel; 8 p.m., Comparisons — Three Fishermen; 8:30 p.m., Victoria Outdoorsmen — Hunting and Fishing; 9 p.m., You and the Law — Saanich Police Force; 9:30 p.m., Outlook.

REACH FOR THE TOP. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Victoria Senior Secondary and Alberni Senior Secondary schools clash tonight.

MOD SQUAD. 7:30 p.m., Channels 4 and 8. "The Price of Love" puts Linc (Clarence Williams) in a precarious situation when he stumbles onto a kidnap plot and becomes a hostage. Meanwhile, back at police headquarters, Captain Greer (Tige Andrews) launches an investigation, unaware of Linc's involvement. Paul Richards guests as the kidnap leader, and Clint Howard as the victim.

THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. An itinerant actor named Dick Bremerkamp (Mike Minor) bamboozles the whole clan into believing many things about him. Granny believes he's Davy Crockett; Drysdale believes he's a millionaire's nephew; Elly May accepts him as a suitor, and Jane Hathaway embraces him as a fellow birdwatcher until the hour of reckoning.

PEANUTS SPECIAL. 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Schroeder the Beethoven man takes centre stage in this first-run cartoon, Play It Again, Charlie Brown. Lucy has arranged piano-playing Schroeder's debut at a PTA benefit. But the parents are expecting a rock concert and Schroeder won't deliver.

TELESCOPE. 8:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Dr. Jon MacInnis, medical doctor from Barrie, Ontario, who has turned to marine research and medicine, is profiled. He is a medical consultant for the United States Sealab project and also designed Canada's underwater habitat located in Georgian Bay.

MOVIE OF THE WEEK. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. The title is "In Search of America" but it turns out to be more of a three-generation dropout. When Mike Olson (Jeff Bridges) drops out of high school, and wants to see the country, his parents (Carl Betz as father and Vera Miles as his mother) and even his grandmother (Ruth McDevitt) decide to go with him. They convert a Greyhound bus into living quarters and hit the road. Among those they meet are Sal Mineo (as an aging hippie), and Howard Duff and Kim Hunter, as parents of a girl dropout. Good acting all down the line.

TUESDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "Spin Out." It's an Elvis Presley flick of which much can't be said except that it made money in theatrical release, as did all Presley pictures. He plays the leader of a touring musical group who has a unique problem: girls keep chasing him with marriage in mind. Among those in hot pursuit are Diane McBain and Shelley Fabares.

VIETNAM SPECIAL. 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Sad Song of a Yellow Skin is a National Film Board award-winning documentary on the plight of the people of Saigon, who have lived on the fringes of war for the past 30 years.

TUESDAY NIGHT. 10 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Death Row, U.S.A. This is Truman Capote's chilling documentary on capital punishment. It was originally filmed for a United States network but because of its controversial nature has never been telecast south of the border. Capote interviews prisoners awaiting death on the Death Rows of state prisons.

MARCUS WELBY, M.D. 10 p.m., Channel 4. One-time movie actress Alexis Smith and her husband Craig Stevens (TV's Peter Gunn) play parents of young girl who develops a severe ulcer because she feels they don't love her. Doctors Welby (Robert Young) and Kiley (James Brolin) try to help the girl, portrayed by Laurie Prange.

CBS REPORTS. 10 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. "The Selling of the Pentagon." (Rerun.) If you didn't catch the original airing of this controversial program last February 23, don't miss it tonight. It is a stabbing, probing and revealing look at the Pentagon's public relations operations. The reverberations from the initial telecast set off heated government political debates. Roger Mudd's narration is incisive.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30, Channel 12: Halliday Brand (1957 western). Joseph Cotten, Viveca Lindfors. The autocratic head of the Halliday family is stubbornly opposed to the romance of his daughter with a half-breed.

8:30, Channel 4: In Search of America (TV pilot), Carl Betz, Vera Miles. The story is about a family enthusiastically hitting the road in a 1928 Greyhound bus to see America.

11:30, Channel 13: Delinquent Parents (1938 drama), Doris Weston, Maurice Murphy. A respected civic leader sees her daughter following the same wrong road that she did when she was young.

11:50, Channel 2: The Important Man (Mexican; 1962 drama), Toshiro Mifune, Columbo Domingue. Tale of a town bum who tries to better himself.

12:00, Channel 6: The Man With the X-Ray Eyes (1963 science fiction), Ray Milland, Diana Van Der Vlis. A doctor invents a serum enabling him to see through objects.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

I just read an interesting article in the journal, "Medical Insight," by Dr. Morris E. Chafetz, an able psychiatrist, who discusses the psychic and mental distress of women who have had a total hysterectomy (removal of both the womb and their ovaries) and men who have been castrated (removal of the testicles). As he says, men often suffer great mental distress when they are castrated, and it should be recognized that some women are also greatly distressed when they have a total hysterectomy! Dr. Chafetz urges his fellow doctors to keep in mind the possibility of great distress after removal of the woman's ovaries.

Years ago, when I discovered that many surgeons were removing normal ovaries when they had to remove a womb, I asked them why they did it. Often I was told that it was technically easier for them and would save a woman from someday getting cancer in an ovary.

Dr. Chafetz quoted Dr. Montagu Barker, who recently studied 729 women to determine the incidence of psychiatric illness after total hysterectomy. He used as his criterion that the patient had to be referred to a psychiatrist because of her mental upset. As a "control group" he used 280 women who had only their gallbladders removed. The incidence of psychiatric referral after removal of the ovaries was 2½ times that of psychiatric referral after removal of the gallbladder, and almost three times higher than the expected incidence among women of similar age in the general population. A depression was by far the most common symptom of the castrated woman. Of course, there were many other milder psychiatric troubles.

Dr. Barker found also that if after castration the woman had trouble with her husband, she had a six times greater incidence of psychiatric referral. Many a husband showed a disturbed behavior following his wife's hysterectomy. I know a number of women who have told me that after their hysterectomies, their husbands had no more to do with them sexually. The men seemed to think that their wives were in no condition any longer to have sexual relations.

It might be wise for every woman who is going to have her womb removed, to ask the surgeon to leave her ovaries if he possibly can. One of my dear friends, an able professor of gynecology, told me once that before he ever removes a woman's uterus and possibly her ovaries, he insists on having a chat with her and with her husband, once or twice, in order to answer all their questions, fears and misapprehensions, and to try to convince them that their sex life should continue entirely unchanged.

5c AD GETS DIME STORE
PRESIDENT JOB
Hubert T. Parsons, president of Woolworths from 1919 to 1952, got an $8-a-week job with the firm at 19 when he ran a five-cent Situations Wanted ad in the former New York World which caught the fancy of Frank Woolworth, the chain store magnate.

FISHERIES TECHNOLOGISTS MEET

Protein Use Under Study

In an interview today, president Dr. Neil Tomlinson said the scientists are exploring the possibilities of converting the waste material into fertilizer and other products in an economical manner.

Acting director of the fisheries research board's Vancouver laboratory, Tomlinson said much of the fish pieces not used in canneries could be made into a powdered supplement rich in protein.

A reduction plant, using such material and "scrap fish" not used for the commercial market, is being set up on the east coast.

Tomlinson said this method of processing has been used "between 20 and 30 years" but has proven a failure in its original aim of providing food to un-developed countries because they cannot afford to buy.

"A plant in Chile, as an example, has never really got off the ground."

Tomlinson feels the supplement could be used in breads and other food products by countries like Canada who could afford it.

He was optimistic about the amount of mercury being monitored in local waters.

"Chloralkalile plants, such as pulp mills have been mostly cleaned up or have reduced the amounts to minimum."

Tomlinson said the meeting is also concerned with the problem of pesticide residue in foods.

Another item under discussion is the setting of standard packaging and quality for food sold on an international basis.

Practise Available For Postal System

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians writing letters to MPs, government departments or friends in Ottawa will be able to practise with a new postal code after April 1.

But since the machines required to read the new codes won't be installed for "about 15 months that's all it will be — practice.

At a news conference Monday, Jean-Pierre Cote, minister responsible for the post office, said the new system for addressing letters will be in effect by 1974, when machinery will be installed in 15 major post offices across the country, including Victoria.

But Canadians will be given and encouraged to use their code numbers over the next few months. A promotional program expected to cost "some hundreds of thousands of dollars" will be implemented to encourage people to use the new codes, Cote said.

It is hoped that by the time the machines are ready, Canadians will be in the habit of using their codes. Total cost of the new system is expected to be between $60 and $80 million.

BETTER THAN ZIP CODE

Cote said the new code will speed the work of sorting and sending Canada's estimated 5 billion yearly pieces of mail.

He described the code system, based on a combination of three numbers and three letters from the alphabet, as superior to the all-number zip code used in the United States and an improvement over a similar coding system in Britain.

Its biggest asset is that the combination of letters and figures allow machines to sort mail for individual businesses, apartment houses with more than 50 suites, and for homes in a single city block. Neither the American nor the British system can do this.

Before the Judge

A 26-year-old man was sentenced to three years in prison Monday by Judge William Ostler when he pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft.

Ostler said there was "a clear duty" upon him to impose sentences that are a deterrent in cases in which a particular kind of crime is increasing.

The accused, Neil L. Lyman, address unknown, has a criminal record that stretches back to 1960 and includes convictions for break-ins, theft and uttering offences.

Court was told that Lyman was seen March 2 about 2:15 a.m. crawling from a clothing store at 1402 Douglas.

He was caught, an officer testified, following a chase. A cufflink set belonging to the store was found in his possession.

Clothing was found moved inside the store and placed near the doors.

Gerald Robert Johnson, 20, of 1346 May, was remanded by Ostler to April 1 for presentence report after he pleaded guilty to unlawfully using a knitting needle with intent to procure a miscarriage.

The incident occurred, the officer said, "on or about March 13" at a Victoria motel.

★ ★ ★

A 30-year-old city woman was fined $250 when she pleaded guilty to shoplifting merchandise totalling $28 from Simpsons-Sears.

Judge Ostler imposed the fine on Evelina F. Reda, 2816 Shakespeare.

A store security officer testified the accused was observed leaving the store about 2:15 p.m. March 19 with woman's clothing and babywear she hadn't paid for.

Mysterious Burns Found On Dead Man

City police started an investigation over the weekend into the death last week of an 80-year-old man who was found with mysterious burns to the back of his head.

Mar Quan Pon was found Thursday afternoon in his room by another resident of the rooming house at 534 Fisgard.

The man was still alive when found but died shortly afterward.

Abrasions were noted on the back of the victim's head which proved to be thermal burns through all the skin layers to the bone.

The man's room contained a stove but it was not believed to have been used for a week and there were no major electrical connections.

Police said it was understood Mar had not been out of his room between Monday and the time he was found.

RCMP Holding Arson Suspect

GOLD RIVER — A suspect is in custody in Vancouver and RCMP here are considering an arson charge following a logging camp fire Sunday in which a Victoria-area man was killed.

An RCMP spokesman said any charges would be laid in Gold River after investigation is completed. The suspect's name was not released.

Donald Steigenberger, 256 Atkins, Langford died early Sunday when fire swept the bunkhouse in which he was sleeping. One other employee sleeping in the bunkhouse escaped uninjured.

Air Canada Boeing 747 In Vancouver

VANCOUVER — Air Canada Monday unveiled the pride of its fleet to 350 travel agents, journalists and other guests.

Featuring in-flight movies and six stereo channels, the 365-passenger aircraft cruises at 600 miles per hour.

The 747 is one of three such aircraft which Air Canada plans to employ on its Vancouver-Toronto route and various trans-Atlantic routes beginning April 25.

The 231-foot fuselage contains 12 washrooms and 15 flight attendants cater to passenger needs.

Old timers may recall that in 1938 Air Canada made its first trans-Canadian flight with a Lockheed 10 which carried only 14 passengers and no flight attendants.

Thieves Get $200 at Legion

Police reported $20 was taken from a machine on the basement level, $120 from another machine on the main floor and $60 frim a third machine in the upstairs lounge.

Caravan Ready For Island Tour

Its agenda for next week is: Ganges, Wednesday, Sidney, Thursday, Sooke, Friday, Colwood, Saturday, Mill Bay, Sunday, Duncan, Tuesday, Lake Cowichan, Wednesday.

Blood Clinics Set for Uvic

A Red Cross blood clinic will be held at the University of Victoria in the Student Union Building Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

A blood clinic also will be held today at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort St. from 4:30 to 9 p.m.

Operation Necessary To Join This Club

A new club with a select membership is being formed, with membership drawn from Greater Victoria residents who have had operations leaving them with ileostomy, colostomy or ileal bladder.

First meeting will be held Thursday, March 25, at St. Christopher's Church Hall, Tillicum and Carey, at 8:15 p.m. A level entrance will make it possible for wheelchair members to attend.

Membership is open to patients and one member of their immediate family. President is Mrs. Georgia Virag, and Mrs. Aileen Barer RN will act as advisor.

The surgery involved is total or partial removal of the bowel or bladder, and may have been recently performed or done many years ago.

"The patient finds it difficult to adjust," Mrs. Virag said. "He or she needs a great deal of moral support, because it is a hard experience to go through alone."

Thursday night's meeting will deal with a constitution and a name for the new club.

PLUMMER

MIAMI — The teen-age girl who ran away from home and became involved in the Kent State University demonstrations has been committed to a children's home after running away a second time. The attorney for Mary Vecchio, 15, said she was sent to an institution at Kendall last week by Judge Sidney Weaver because he "had no choice." "When it became clear she was uncontrollable and it was in her best interests to commit her, he did so," said Philip Vitello, the girl's lawyer. "He would have been derelict in his duty if he hadn't." Mary ran away from her suburban Opa-Locka home last year and her parents learned of her whereabouts only when they saw a nationally-distributed picture of her kneeling beside one of four youths slain in the Kent State rioting.

WALLA WALLA, Wash. — A 110-year-old former bronco buster lays his claim for long life to daily amounts of cayenne pepper. "I'm still just a young man," says George Gibbs, who was born March 20, 1861, in Fort Worth, Tex., and lives alone in his small home. He still cuts his own firewood and does his own housekeeping and cooking. Gibbs never married. He says his eyesight is failing and his "bones are aching some now."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A temporary restraining order issued here prohibits the former accountant of entertainer Johnny Cash from removing funds from five local banks. Cash filed suit Monday against the accountant, Herman Clark, claiming Clark and his wife systematically converted more than $300,000 into three private bank accounts during the last year.

CRANBROOK, — Dale Merle Nelson, 31, of West Creston, B.C., declined Monday to enter pleas on two charges of non-capital murder laid after three adults and five children were slain in the West Creston area of the Kootenays Sept. 5, 1970. Not-guilty pleas were entered by the court for Nelson, on trial on two counts in the deaths of Tracy Wasyk, 7, and Catherine St. Amand, 8, Nelson arrested after one of B.C.'s largest manhunts, appeared calm as he entered the courtroom Monday morning but was shaking slightly as he stood to hear the charges against him read.

LONDON — A Mauser pistol carried by Sir Winston Churchill when he was a newspaper correspondent in the Boer War was sold today to U.S. movie producer Carl Foreman for $10,000. The pistol, engraved with the name W. L. S. Churchill, was lost by the young reporter when he was captured by the South Africans in 1899.

LONDON — Canadian-born actor Christopher Plummer has withdrawn from the title role in Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" at the National Theatre, a theatre spokesman said today. Plummer, who appeared in such films as "The Sound of Music" and "Waterloo", pulled out of the play after a disagreement over interpretation with the directors of the play, Manfred Wekwerth and Joachim Tenschert.

Wear Mouth Guards Or Pay Dental Bills

EDMONTON (CP) — Athletes at the University of Alberta will be required to wear mouth guards while taking part in contact sports next year or else pay their own dental repair bills.

Ray Kelly, university athletic trainer, also told a meeting of dentists and sportsmen last week that the university spent $7,875 on 106 dental injuries in the last three years. Hockey accounted for 35 per cent of the injuries.

Dr. Al Bodnarchuk, chairman of the Edmonton and District Dental Society, which sponsored the meeting in connection with National Health Week this week, said he expects the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will be approached to make mouth guards compulsory for hockey players.

Dr. B. K. Nord, an Edmonton dentist, said adequate mouth guards not only reduce dental injury but also more serious injuries, such as concussions and spinal damage, which sometimes are caused by blows to the chin which drive the lower jaw backward.

A proper mouth guard, he said, gives protection to all parts of the mouth, stays firmly in place, is comfortable, allows the wearer to speak easily, is tear resistant, allows free breathing "and even will allow an athlete to chew gum."

REPLANTS POSSIBLE

He recommended that athletes under 12 should wear external guards that fit over the area from chin to nose. This type is best for a youngster whose teeth are growing and changing and who will outgrow custom-fitted internal guards quickly.

Dr. Bodnarchuk recommended that if a youngster has a tooth knocked out, the coach should pick up the tooth in a damp, sterilized gauze and take the youngster quickly to the dentist. Such a tooth can be successfully reimplanted in about 30 per cent of cases.

Leafs Raise Ticket Prices

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League will raise ticket prices by as much as $3.50 a seat for next month's Stanley Cup playoffs.

The club has announced that red seats normally costing $6.50 will be worth $10. The cheapest seats, the greys, will be boosted from $2.50 to $4. Blues, $5.50 during the regular season, will cost $8.

Ex-Mountie Acquitted

EDMONTON (CP) — A retired RCMP officer was found not guilty in Supreme Court of Alberta Monday of possessing $252,000 in stolen stock certificates.

Mr. Justice M. E. Manning said that when Robert John Mawson, 44, of Burnaby was arrested in Vancouver, he had given RCMP a plausible explanation of his involvement with the stocks stolen in New Jersey in 1969.

Mawson, now in the security and investment field, said in a statement he told the people in the United States who wanted to sell the stocks that there was no use in sending highgrade securities to Canada if they could not be validated, "and as a result I had no reason to suspect anything was irregular when they were sent here."

Budget Approved

CALGARY (CP) — City Council approved a $74.8 million capital works budget Monday which included a $2 million provision for easing unemployment.

To create more jobs, the city moved some construction work ahead from 1972 to this year and decided to ask the provincial government for assistance on these projects.

Alberta received $6 million from the federal government as part of an emergency work fund but has not announced how it will be spent.

Baseball Wits Tune Up Early

By The Associated Press

Managers Gene Mauch and Billy Martin showed Monday their wits are all tuned up for the regular baseball season which opens in two weeks.

Mauch, whose Montreal Expos won an exhibition game last week on a double steal, out-thought the opposition again Monday, beating Washington Senators 5-3 with the winning run scoring on a squeeze bunt.

And Martin, returning to the big leagues as Detroit Tigers manager, used 26 players including eight pinch hitters to beat New York Yankees 5-4.

Elsewhere in exhibition baseball, San Diego Padres blasted California Angels 10-0, Pittsburgh Pirates clipped Kansas City Royals 8-4, Philadelphia Phillies trimmed Cincinnati Reds 8-7, New York Mets topped St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, Boston Red Sox bombed Los Angeles Dodgers 10-5, Baltimore Orioles nipped Chicago White Sox 6-5, San Francisco Giants downed Cleveland Indians 5-2 and Chicago Cubs edged Oakland Athletics 5-4.

GETS RUN WITHOUT HIT

Mauch managed the Expos to a run without a hit in the seventh inning against Washington to break a 3-3 tie. Clyde Mashore opened with a walk and Mauch went to the bunting game, sacrificing the runner to second. Then Mashore stole third and raced home on Merv Staehle's bunt for the winning run.

Martin, meanwhile, managing as if the pennant hung in the balance, pulled out a hair-raiser against the Yankees with pinch hitter Kevin Collins delivering a two-run homer in the bottom of the 11th to win it.

The Tigers had tied it with a run in the bottom of the ninth, got another in the last of the 10th to tie it again after New York had scored, and hen pulled it out in the 11th after the Yankees had gone ahead again.

San Diego punished Jim Maloney for all of their 10 runs in ripping California. Dave Campbell had three hits for the Padres, who collected 14 for the day.

ALLOWS TWO HITS

Pittsburgh used home runs by Bob Robertson, Al Oliver and Richie Zisk to rip Kansas City.

Philadelphia rallied for four runs in the ninth inning, the last two on Woody Woodward's error, to whip Cincinnati. Singles by Tim McCarver, Ron Stone, Don Money and Larry Bowa put the Phils' first two runs across in the ninth. Money, Oscar Gamble and Larry Hisle all homered for Philadelphia and Lee May had a three-run shot for the Reds.

St. Louis dropped its fifth straight game with pitcher Fred Norman's 10th inning throwing error allowing the Mets to score the winning run in a squeaker. Norman walked Ken Boswell with one out in the 10th and then threw away Tommie Agee's bouncer, allowing Boswell to score the deciding run.

Rico Petrocelli smashed a homer, double and single as Boston battered Los Angeles. Petrocelli drove in five runs and Billy Conigliaro also contributed three hits to the 14-hit Red Sox attack.

CAN'T MAKE NINE

Mike Cuellar's bid to go nine innings fell two outs short but Tom Dukes cut off a last White Sox' rally to save Baltimore's victory over Chicago. Jay Johnstone's two-run double spoiled it for Cuellar.

Dave Johnson led the Orioles' attack with a two-run double and a homer.

Rookies George Foster and Fran Healy delivered key hits in a three-run eighth inning rally that moved San Francisco past Cleveland. Foster's run-scoring single broke a tie and then Healy followed with a two-run double.

Willie Mays homered for the Giants.

Hal Breeden's two-out double drove in the Cubs' winning run in the ninth inning against Oakland. Gary Jestadt had a three-run homer and Johnny Callison added a solo shot for the Cubs.

Hodge Now Canuck Scout

VANCOUVER (CP) — General Manager Bud Poile of the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League announced Monday that goaltender Charlie Hodge, who played in 15 of the club's 20 wins, has been relegated to the position of scout for the balance of the season.

Poile said George Gardner will start tonight against St. Louis Blues in Vancouver and Gardner will alternate with Dunc Wilson for the club's remaining eight games this season.

He said both goalies have complained of not getting enough ice time but the club can only protect two netminders on its roster in June so the next eight games will determine the futures of Gardner and Wilson with the club, as backup man to Hodge.

Belgian Race Banned

BRUSSELS (AP) — Lack of suitable safety measures has prompted the International Automobile Federation to drop a ban on the Grand Prix of Belgium, and race officials have cancelled this year's run, scheduled for early in June.

Miami, Dallas Lead Super Bowl Bidding

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Miami and Dallas were the leading candidates as the Super Bowl derby got under way today at the National Football League meetings with six cities bidding to hold pro football's glamor event next season.

Seven groups representing the six locals began presenting their cases before the assembled NFL owners at 15-minute intervals beginning at 10 a.m. EST, with a decision expected either late today or early Wednesday.

Other cities in the race are: New Orleans, Los Angeles, Houston—seeking it for both the Astrodome and Rice Stadium, and Jacksonville, Fla.

The owners spent most of Mondays' opening day of the meetings in committee sessions, but there were these developments:

—The name of the Boston Patriots, changed only last month to Bay State Patriots, was changed again—to New England Patriots.

—Ralph Wilson, owner of the Buffalo Bills, reported that progress had been made on a new stadium which, if continued to conclusion, would keep the club from moving to Seattle.

—Commissioner Pete Rozelle acknowledged the NFL could be faced with a problem if the ultimate legal ruling in the case involving Spencer Haywood of the National Basketball Association's Seattle SuperSonics forces the sport to do away with the ban on signing players before their college class graduates.

Break-Through In Auto Racing

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — The United States has been awarded a second race on the world Grand Prix auto-racing circuit, thus breaking a preceedent that, until now, has limited such events to one to a country.

The second race, to be known as the Western United States Grand Prix, will be held at the new $30 million racing facility at Ontario, Calif., April 9, 1972. It will carry a minimum purse of $250,000.

The Formula I world drivers' championship thus will have three stops in North America — the Canadian Grand Prix that alternates each year between Mosport, Ont., and St. Joviet, Que., and the U.S. Grand Prix at Watkins, Glen, N.Y., each October, in addition to the Ontario, Calif., event.

LIONS' CAMP ON MAINLAND

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League will hold their 1971 training camp at the University of British Columbia for the third season, the club announced Monday.

More than 75 players are expected to attend the camp, from June 14 to July 4. The Lions play their first preseason game July 5 against Edmonton Eskimos at Empire Stadium in Vancouver.

The Lions also announced Monday the signing of halfback Denis Green from Iowa University and tackle Victor Mittelberg from Michigan State University.

Argos Sign Pair

TORONTO (UPI)—Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League have signed two American players to their roster season, Ezell "Easy" Jones, an offensive tackle from the University of Minnesota, and Floyd Reese, a defensive tackle from UCLA.

Abolition of Poverty Gandhi's Prime Target

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, outlining the program of her new government, said today its central objective "must be the abolition of poverty."

Mrs. Gandhi also pledged continuation of India's policy of non-alignment and said she was concerned about "the setting up of military bases by outside powers in the Indian Ocean."

"My government is keenly aware of the intolerable living conditions of the urban poor," the prime minister said in an address written by the government and read to both houses of Parliament by President V. V. Giri.

"The clearance and improvement of slums and rehabilitation of slum dwellers will figure prominently in the agenda of economic and social reforms which my government has in view."

To "achieve victory in the war against poverty and social injustice," she said, the government would impose ceilings on urban property development, expand rural electrification and irrigation, increase agricultural and industrial production, initiate emergency programs to reduce unemployment and allocate construction sites to landless workers.

FAMILY PLANNING VITAL

Family planning would be made "a vital element in the gigantic task of social transformation," she said, with the small family becoming "the accepted social norm."

India's population, now estimated at 560 million, is growing by about 30,000 a day.

Mrs. Gandhi also promised a constitutional amendment to abolish the government incomes and special privileges of the nation's 278 maharajas. Although the money represented is negligible, the emotional issue was one which apparently won her wide support in the parliamentary elections. Her New Congress party won 350 of 515 contested seats.

The Supreme Court last December declared unconstitutional the executive decree cutting off the maharajas' $6.4 million in annual payments and other privileges given them for exchange for their allegiance when India became independent.

Dealing briefly with foreign affairs, Mrs. Gandhi said India deplored the expansion of the Indochina war to Cambodia and Laos.

She suggested the "only solution" was a negotiated settlement within the framework of the Geneva accords, with an international agreement signed by the great powers and other interested parties.

IT PROBABLY WILL AFFECT THE WILDLIFE

TICHBORNE, Ont. (CP) — Derailment of five cars of a CP Rail freight Monday dumped thousands of gallons of laxative near a swampy area 30 miles north of Kingston.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission was investigating whether the milk of magnesia spilled from a tank car would affect wildlife.

Petition Questions Legality of War Act

MONTREAL (CP) — A petition questioning the constitutionality and legality of the War Measures Act was brought before a panel of five Quebec Court of Appeals judges Monday by two men arrested and detained under the act.

Author Pierre Vallieres and teacher Charles Gagnon say in their petition that the act and the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act which replaced it are illegal.

The two men brought the action before Appeals Court as a means of obtaining a writ of habeas corpus which, if granted, would determine if their liberty were being restrained without legal cause.

Both men have been held without bail since Oct. 16.

The men have spent a better part of the last two months attempting to put their case before various courts but were rejected every time. A similar habeas corpus writ was rejected by Judge Jean-Paul Bergeron of Quebec Superior Court Jan. 14.

The panel of judges include Judges Andre Taschereau, Paul Casey, Roger Brossard, G. H. Montmagny and Jean Turgeon.

It was not known when they would render a judgment on the petition.

The two men argued that the War Measures Act was illegal because it can only be called in time of war or a real insurrection—situations which they say did not exist during the kidnap crisis last October.

U.S., U.K. Join Struggle For Air Charter Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — Britain and the United States appear to have joined Canada in the forefront of a move to amend the regulations governing group air charters.

J. W. Pickersgill, president of the Canadian transport commission, recently told a Commons committee Canada would end so-called affinity charters if international co-operation weren't required.

Now the United States Civil Aeronautics Board has served notice it is considering a change in its rules covering affinity flights while BOAC in Britain has introduced a plan which gets around the affinity rule.

Under theaffinity rule an organization whose main purpose is not travel can charter an international flight for less than ordinary air fares. The only catch is that those in the charter group must have been association members for longer than six months prior to the flight.

Mr. Pickersgill told the Commons committee the rule creates a privileged class of traveller and is almost impossible to enforce.

He said he would like to see the rule wiped out so a charter group could be "organized simply for travel without the members of the group having to belong to some association for a purpose other than travel."

AGREEMENT NEEDED

But, he said, the rule could only be eliminated through international agreement.

Up to now all European countries had supported the rule as set out by the International Air Transport Association.

But, four months ago a group of European air carriers held a meeting to discuss the affinity problem, he said, and another meeting is planned for Washington next month.

The U.S. board proposed in February that any combination of 50 or more people who can make firm plans six months in advance could take advantage of low charter fares.

The board did not say when it planned to introduce the new rule.

BOAC plans to extend a program it introduced for flight from Britain to certain Caribbean islands last year.

The BOAC fares offer big reductions for passengers who pay in advance. The fare is non-refundable but passengers can insure themselves against cancellation.

PUTS VIEWS INTO ACTION

Judge Urges Early Parole

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Patrick Hartt of Ontario Supreme Court said Monday he has urged the National Parole Board to grant an early parole for a man he sentenced to 10 years in jail Nov. 1 last year.

When Mr. Justice Hartt sentenced Randel T. Paquette, 21, of Preston on a manslaughter charge, he said in a three-page statement:

"I personally can see no benefit to anyone in sending you to penitentiary for a long term but under the prevailing theories of sentencing I have no choice."

Mr. Justice Hartt noted in his judgment that Paquette had been raised in "abject poverty, subjected to extreme abuse from an alcoholic father."

He had a record going back to age 16. All the cases involved drunkenness.

"The society that now demands vengeance as a punishment for your crime must at the same time be prepared to accept a large measure of the responsibility for the fact that you are here today," the judge told Paquette.

Mr. Justice Hartt said Monday that Paquette "was a young man and had real problems."

"After they were straightened out, it would be ridiculous to have him spend 10 years in jail."

Paquette normally would not be eligible for parole until he has served three years and three months of the 10-year sentence.

In a letter to a Toronto newspaper, a spokesman for the parole board said "if circumstances so warrant it, the board may review Paquette's case at an earlier date."

FAVORS TREATMENT

Mr. Justice Hartt, at 44 the youngest judge on the Ontario Supreme Court, has recommended leniency in several other cases.

They include a 10-year sentence he imposed Friday on a 20-year-old Kitchener youth for attempted murder of a small girl.

Mr. Justice Hartt on April 1 is to become first chairman of the Law Reform Commission of Canada for a five-year term.

When he was named to the post Dec. 22, Justice Minister John Turner said his first job will be an overhaul of the Criminal Code.

The permanent commission, established by legislation last year, will maintain a constant review of the law and attempt to keep it up to date.

To fill the appointment, Mr. Justice Hartt will take a five-year leave of absence from the bench.

Funeral Service For David Nairne

Funeral services will be held this afternoon for David A. Nairne, 77, who for years was connected with the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau under the late commissioner George I. Warren.

Nairne, who died Saturday, was also well-known in the automotive business in earlier days.

His wife predeceased him. He is survived by two brothers, Reginald and Charles R.; a sister Caroline at 642 Battery Street, and cousins in Victoria, Vancouver and Scotland.

Rifle Risk Debated In Saanich

Beaver Lake Elementary has asked the Saanich school board for permission to operate a shooting gallery in a tent at its school fair on April 2 and 3.

Board members, who felt that air rifles might be risky, were chided by Trustee John Pennington, who said: "This is a virile country. We cannot emasculate a whole generation to the point where there is no danger whatever."

The school board decided to leave the final decision regarding legality of the shooting gallery on the school grounds and the board's liability up to Trustee Gordon Ewan, a firearms expert.

Rental Board Under BBB . . . With Police Aid

Victoria's rental advisory board moved under the wing of the Better Business Bureau Monday, but needed a little help from the police to do so.

The board failed to get unanimous approval for its new status when George Dawson, a representative from the Capital Region Tenants' Association, opposed the move on the grounds that the BBB is much the same as the Chamber of Commerce.

SHARP EXCHANGE

Chairman Robert Baird started off the meeting with a sharp exchange with Hilda Marshall, another tenants' representative and, when Miss Marshall became "belligerent," in Baird's words, the city clerk was called on the telephone.

Miss Marshall had earlier distributed notes to reporters saying there was an attempt to thwart tenants' rights.

Instead of the clerk, two policemen arrive.

"We have Miss Marshall here who is very belligerent, and asked her to go and she refused," said Baird.

NOT BELLIGERENT

"I don't call myself belligerent — will there be a charge officer?" Miss Marshall replied.

The policemen quietly said they would discuss the matter outside the committee room, and Miss Marshall did not reappear.

Dawson was told by other members of the board that he was wrong in thinking the BBB represents the interests of business. He was told business provides the money to run the operation, but the BBB represents consumers.

NEW CHAIRMAN

BBB manager Bill Tindall, who became the new chairman of the rental board, said he would have no more power as chairman than he had at the moment. But he said he would decide the make-up of the new board. The BBB office would handle all enquiries in the future.

Baird told the board he had failed in an attempt to obtain 500 free copies of the Landlord and Tenant Act from the provincial government. An offer was made, however, 500 copies at 20 cents each with a discount of 20 per cent.

SHOULD ASSIST

Baird asked reporters not to copy his words and then said he thought the government should assist because the board was doing the government's work for it.

Then board member Jack Vaio said several callers have told him the attorney-general's department had referred their complaints to him.

In that case, said Baird, smiling, he didn't mind if his opinion was known.

Tindall told the board it may eventually end up recommending that a judicially empowered rental grievance board be set up under the Rent Control Act.

Breakwater Hearing Planned for April 19

A public hearing on the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's bid to build a rock breakwater in Cadboro Bay will be held Monday, April 19 and continued April 20 if necessary.

Oak Bay council decided to hold the hearing Monday after listening to club representative, lawyer Ian Stewart, and representative for residents opposing the breakwater, lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood.

Mayor Frances Elford said the issue should not be dealt with quickly and that it needed considerable study. She asked if council felt the council chambers were large enough to hold the number of people expected to attend.

I HEAR ALL

Ald. Brian Smith commented: "It was adequate for campers and trailers (the controversial bylaw regarding storage of such objects) and so on. It is important that we hear everyone — not hire an arena."

Flood, after Stewart had stated that the club was ready to deal with the issue now, said he needed the extra time because the people he represented are "endeavoring to get some tests carried out; they are looking into the question of getting an hydraulic test done."

Later in the meeting, Ald. Shirley Dowell questioned a letter received from Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

CONTAMINATION FEAR

The letter, which was a copy of one sent to one of the chief breakwater opponents, Dr. Ross Henry, suggested that the breakwater might affect the level of contamination on Loon Bay and also the Loon Bay beach.

Whitbread noted that 1970 fecal coliform reports showed that one out of 12 samples taken was above an MPN of 1,000, the level accepted by the Pollution Control Board.

Ald. Dowell contended that the raw sewage on beaches was not caused by boats of the yacht club but was sewage from 100 homes in the Uplands, being discharged into the bay at the bottom of Humber Road.

Ald. Smith concurred and Ald. John Goult added: "Ald. Dowell's remarks are well-founded when she suggests that the houses are contributing in the main. In my opinion the bulk of pollution is caused by the outfall."

Council agreed to ask Whitbread to report after tests were made of both the Humber Road and Ripon Road outfalls.

Letters were received opposing the expansion of the Turkey Head breakwater and the Oak Bay Marina.

These will be dealt with when council receives notice from the federal department of transport that marina president Bob Wright has requested the expansion. No such letter has yet been received.

Ald. Douglas Watts noted that although some residents might be against the extension the council would have to make a decision that was in the best interests of the majority.

Letters will be sent to Minister of Transport Donald Jamieson and Defence Minister Donald Macdonald calling for an effective and adequate rescue service for Victoria waters.

Referring to the capsizing of the troller Janola and the subsequent transfer of the four victims to a U.S. coast guard helicopter, Smith said:

"It is shocking when we live near a major naval base and have helicopters that for some obscure reason are not manned on weekends, when the majority of boaters are out, that we have to rely on the services of an American helicopter. We are awfully good at defending Arctic sovereignty — but what about protecting our own nationals in our own waters in the same way?"

Letters will also be sent to Liberal MPs David Groos and David Anderson.

HEROISM PRAISED

Council will also write Percy Brown, owner of the Becher Bay Marina, commending him on his heroism in rescuing the four people aboard Janola at the risk of his own life. Municipal solicitor D. M. Gordon will advise whether the council can legally contribute to the Percy Brown Trust Fund, set up to pay for a suitable rescue boat in the Becher Bay area.

In other business:

- Council unanimously supported the Greater Victoria Public Library's budget and its per capita rate of $5.19.
- Agreed it could not hire students for summer employment at less than the rate set in a collective agreement with the Canadian Union of Public Employees.
- Decided to hold a public hearing April 5 at 7:30 p.m. on three bylaws; one which will define zoning requirements for town house development and others which will preclude service stations being built at 2013 Oak Bay Avenue and the northwest corner of Newport and Windsor.
- Decided that Smith interview University of British Columbia graduate students as initial step in having students make a survey on apartments in Oak Bay to determine whether apartments contribute to widening of the tax base.

Saigon Remnants Flee From Laos

Times News Services

KHE SANH — The remnants of South Vietnam's invasion forces fled across the border from Laos today under heavy Communist assault and U.S. support forces began pulling out of the country's northern border areas.

As the Laos operation drew to a close, North Vietnamese troops stepped up their attacks on the U.S. forces in the northerwest sector who backed the South Vietnamese in their 44-day drive to cut North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh trail.

North Vietnamese artillery, rockets, mortars and sappers hit the forward base of Khe Sanh near the Laotian border and eight other U.S. positions supporting the South Vietnamese in Laos.

GIs KILLED

The U.S. command reported seven Americans were killed and 40 wounded, but field reports said the casualties were higher.

Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported from the northern front that some U.S. helicopter units began pulling out of Khe Sanh and returning to their normal headquarters at Chu Lai and Phu Bai.

PROVIDED SUPPORT

Informed sources said it would be some time before the last U.S. units are withdrawn from western Quang Tri province, bordering Laos on the west and the demilitarized zone on the north.

About 10,000 U.S. troops were put into the sector Jan. 30 to act as a blocking force for the South Vietnamese and to support the Saigon forces with helicopters and supply movements.

It was understood that Khe Sanh itself would be closed within the next three weeks. Ham Nghi, the South Vietnamese forward command post for the operation nearby, now is in the process of closing out.

JETS HIT

It was the first time in

DON'T COUNT NIXON OUT

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon clearly warned the pundits Monday night that they are running grave risks of being wrong when they speculate that he may not be a presidential candidate again next year.

The idea of voluntary retirement, raised by a television interviewer, is "quite premature," the U.S. president said. "I have made no decision with regard to what I will do in 1972 either for myself or the man who will run for vice-president."

The choice of words raised some doubts about the future of Vice-President Spiro Agnew, as the president did not take the opportunity to deny reports he may choose a Democrat, as Abraham Lincoln did in 1864, to be his running mate in 1972.

Laos Soldiers Retake Town Near Capital

Times News Services

VIENTIANE — Government troops have recaptured the closest government position to Luang Prabang which was overrun by two North Vietnamese companies early today, Laotian military sources said.

They said the North Vietnamese captured the position at the village of Ban Cho, about two miles northeast of the royal capital.

However, royal Lao army troops defending Luang Prabang later drove them out after several hours of heavy fighting.

Meanwhile in London, Laotian Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma called for Britain and Russia to act urgently to remove the Communist-led military threat against Luang Prabang.

ARMED FORCES SEIZE POWER

Argentine Head Ousted

By HAROLD SINNOTT

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — The armed forces seized power in a bloodless coup early today, ending a long-simmering dispute between military leaders and deposed President Roberto M. Levingston about the handling of labor disputes and general unrest in the country.

Another reason for the coup, The Associated Press said, was that the president wanted to put off elections for another four or five years.

Levingston, who took a harder line on the disputes than the military, will be replaced by a three-man junta, one member chosen from each of the services.

Levingston, 51, who was himself appointed by the armed forces, had been in power for only nine months. He took office last June after the armed forces ousted the regime of Juan Carlos Ongania.

Levingston, an army general, is the ninth Argentine president to be ousted by a military coup in the last 40 years. The country of 23 million has had six military coups and several unsuccessful revolts in 40 years.

The announcement that the military now plans to run the country itself was made by the army commander-in-chief, Gen. Alejandro A. Lanusse.

The commanders of the navy and air force joined with Lanusse in removing the president because Levingston Monday tried to get rid of the army chief, who was opposed to the president's nationalist policies.

The statement by the commanders struck observers here as reaffirming plans for a return to democratic rule, which ended in Argentina when Ongania took power.

LAST-STAND BID

The president made a last-stand bid to bolster his increasingly shaky position by firing Lanusse in a nationwide broadcast Monday night. He said Lanusse was derelict in his duty by failing to tighten security measures in the province of Cordoba, a hotbed of serious riots and anti-government demonstrations in the last 10 days.

In the auto industry centre, rioting led by workers and students opposed to the government's economic and social policies left several persons dead, dozens injured and property damage estimated at $3.2 million.

Within an hour of his broadcast, it became apparent that Levingston had miscalculated the strength of Lanusse.

Communists Gather

MOSCOW (UPI) — Delegations of more than 80 of the world's communist parties are scheduled to arrive here by the end of the week to attend the 24th Soviet Party Congress, communist sources said today. All the ruling parties will be represented except China and Albania.

RUSSIANS SET OFF SECOND N-BLAST

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — The Uppsala Seismologic Institution today reported the second underground nuclear blast in two days in the Soviet Union.

Prof. Marcus Baath, the head of the institution, said the explosion was recorded at 2 a.m. EST from the western slope of Ural Mountains and had a magnitude of 5.9 points on the openended Richter scale. The Uppsala institution reported another underground nuclear blast Monday from the Semipalatinsk area of Siberia.

New Irish PM To Smash Terror

BELFAST (CP) — Brian Faulkner, a veteran in-fighter in Northern Ireland's political and religious strife, took over as premier today and pledged to "smash terrorism."

The 50-year-old Faulkner—regarded as a moderate—beat back the challenge of militant Protestant right-winger William Craig who wants to rearm the police and set up internment camps for suspected Irish Republican Army terrorists.

Faulkner, a skilful political manoeuvrer, promised the Protestant militants, who have accused British troops and reform advocates of being too soft on the IRA, that he would stamp out "not only terrorism and sabotage, but riots and disorder."

And he held out a pledge to the Roman Catholic minority that he would work for restoration of "confidence throughout the entire community." He said he did not want "harsh measures or repressive measures."

CAUCUS SHOWDOWN

The showdown in the two-man fight came in a caucus of the Protestant-based Unionist party.

Canada Can't Halt Pipeline, Says MP

TORONTO (CP) The United States will permit the construction of a trans-Alaska pipeline to carry Arctic oil to southern markets and "all the political pressure in Canada . . . isn't going to affect what the Americans do," Patrick Mahoney, Liberal MP for Calgary South, said Monday.

Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, said in an interview a Canadian pipeline will be built, but the Alaska line will come first.

"Ultimately the need for petroleum resources would outweigh the damage that might be done to the North Slope of Alaska and the east coast of Canada," he said.

Mr. Mahoney said a Canadian pipeline down the Mackenzie River would not solve the crude oil shortage in California and that is why the Americans will build the Alaska route.

A group of seven major oil companies favor the 800-mile Alaska line and a west coast tanker route to move oil to Washington state from Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's northern coast.

Representatives of the companies concerned are due to Energy Minister J. J. Greene and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien in Ottawa Wednesday when the two ministers are expected to urge the adoption of the proposed Mackenzie River route.

Threat Charge Laid

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Maxwell James Thoms, 19, of La Scie, Nfld., was charged in magistrate's court today at Gander in connection with a threatening letter received by Premier Joseph Smallwood during the Quebec FLQ crisis last fall. Thoms was remanded in custody for eight days and ordered taken to St. John's for a psychiatric examination.

Tax Evader Fined

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Allen Klein, former business manager of the Beatles, was fined $15,000 Monday for not filing income-tax reports for 10 employees. Federal Judge Morris Lasker imposed the fine and gave Klein until April 15, the filing date for 1970 income-tax returns, to make the payment. Failure to pay by that time could result in a prison term.

Deficit Budgeted

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia's new Liberal government opted for a deficit budget rather than increased taxes or a cut in programs because expenditures are outstripping revenues, Finance Minister Peter Nicholson said Monday.

Court Martial Set

FORT McPHERSON, Ga. (UPI) — The army announced today that initial pretrail hearing in the court martial of Capt. Ernest L. Medina, 34, charged with over-all responsibility for the My Lai massacre, will be held here May 24.

Move Blocked

OTTAWA (CP) — A move to have the chartered banks appear before the Commons finance committee to defend service-charge increases was blocked today.

Ottawa-Home Oil Deal Collapses

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian government Tuesday withdrew its bid to acquire control of Home Oil Co. Ltd. and announced that private Canadian buyers were now negotiating for control of the company.

J. J. Greene, minister of energy, mines and resources, told the Commons that he had failed to reach a "firm understanding" in negotiations which began March 11.

He said he was now confident that a buyer would be found in the private sector who would maintain "Canadian ownership and full Canadian control of Home Oil."

The controversial negotiations to acquire control of Home Oil were begun after the government effectively blocked efforts by Home Oil's president, R. A. Brown, Jr., of Calgary, to sell his controlling shares to the Ashland Oil Co. Ltd. of Kentucky.

NO AUTHORITY

Acknowledging that it did not have the legislative authority to tell Brown what to do with his shares, the government first tried to find a Canadian buyer in the private sector. When this failed, the government began negotiations to acquire the shares itself to prevent them from falling into foreign hands.

Greene said it would not be in the best interests of either the government or Brown to disclose the reasons why the negotiations did not succeed.

He said Brown "understands the attitude of the Canadian government" that a sale to foreign interests would be unacceptable.

The minister said "Canadian buyers" were now negotiating with Brown and a sale to them would be "in accord with the government's objective."

He said the government would "continue to keep the situation under close surveillance."

Army Coup Success Claimed

FREETOWN (AP) — The commander of Sierra Leone's army, Brig. John Bangurah, declared today that the army has topped the government of Prime Minister Siaka P. Stevens.

"Fellow citizens, owing to the current state of affairs the army has been compelled to take control of the situation until further notice," Bangurah said in a broadcast repeated over and over on the government radio station.

"Any undue outside interference will be viewed with disdain," an apparent warning to neighboring African countries sympathetic to Stevens to keep out. His whereabouts were not known.

The coup apparently was launched at dawn when a band of about 12 armed soldiers attacked Stevens' home. Security guards killed two of the soldiers in a 15-minute gunfight and the house was damaged.

ECM Policies Spark Huge Farm Protest

BRUSSELS (AP) — About 60,000 farmers from the six Common Market countries marched into downtown Brussels with pitch forks waving today in a massive demonstration for higher prices and more aid.

A witness said one farmer was shot and wounded in the back by a policeman during an outbreak of violence along the march route.

The ministers are holding a three-day meeting on prices for the season beginning April 1. The ministers, recalling the cows brought into a recent session by protesting farmers, were meeting a mile and a half away — on the top floor of a 15-storey building.

Mansholt pleaded with the ministers for joint financing of his plan to "modernize farming in the six countries. It would increase the size of farms and help small, inefficient farmers to leave the land. But Mansholt does not want to raise prices as high as the farmers would like.

ORGANISMS RECREATED IN LABORATORY

Scientists Look at Mars Life Compounds

By STUART AUERBACH

WASHINGTON (WP) — Compounds that are necessary for the creation of life are probably being formed by sunlight on the surface of Mars, three scientists reported Monday.

These organic compounds were produced in a laboratory under conditions simulating the Martian surface and its bombardment of ultra violet rays from the sun.

While the compounds — formaldefiyde, acetaldehyde and glycolic acid — are needed for life to exist, they are not enough by themselves to produce it.

"This is the most favorable indication for a possible Martian biological evolution that we have had in the last five years," said Dr. Norman O. Horowitz, one of the three scientists who worked on the experiments for the past year.

"There are still many uncertainties, however, which won't be resolved until we land on the planet in 1975."

The first unmanned landings on Mars are scheduled for 1975. However, two spacecraft will be launched in May to orbit the planet at close range for three months. They are scheduled to begin their orbits in November.

Horowitz, who has always been extremely cautious about the existence of any form of life on Mars, said the new findings increase the chance "from highly improbable to just improbable."

The chance that life exists on Mars had been dimmed by pictures and scientific instruments carried to within 2,000 miles of the surface of the red planet.

They showed a bleak, inhospitable surface and the absence of such vital elements for life as nitrogen.

They did, however, send back enough information about the surface of Mars, its atmosphere and the ultraviolet rays that bombard it to allow Dr. Horowitz and his colleagues, Drs. Jerry S. Hubbard and James P. Hardy, to build a model of the Martian surface.

The surface was made from either sterilized soil or crushed glass in a gas mixture of 97 per cent carbon dioxide, some carbon monoxide and water vapor.

CREATION UNEXPECTED

Horowitz said the unexpected creation of organic compounds was caused by the reaction of the simulated surface to the large amount of ultraviolet rays, previously believed to be incapable of producing such a reaction.

Formaldehyde and acetaldehyde are "important starting materials for the synthesis of a variety of organic compounds, including sugars," the three researchers said.

Horowitz said in a telephone interview that he believes the three organic compounds would react with ammonia — if there is any on Mars — to produce amino acids, the building blocks of proteins.

Their findings were published in the March issue of the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Flu Bug Smog Bound

A potent flu bug working its way through the lower mainland is having only a slight effect on the Victoria area so far, school and health officials noted today.

Absenteeism in mainland schools and offices soared this week, with victims off for a week with high fever, sore throat, coughs and other symptoms. A Vancouver health officer said he did not think there would be an epidemic.

* * *

Absenteeism is up slightly at most Victoria-area schools. Most principals blame the flu, although there also are reports of mumps and rubella.

The typical pattern is that reported by Central Junior High. Students there are staying home one day, returning to school the next and then being laid low for a week by the virus.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, Victoria's senior medical health officer, says the flu bug can be expected to move across on the ferry, but notes that the annual flu increase won't hit Victoria as hard as Vancouver.

* * *

"We're healthier here," said Whitbread, "no doubt because of climatic conditions. We don't have the smog, or the day-in, day-out rain."

Dr. Anthony Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, says the worst time of the year for flu is past, and considers this winter a comparatively good one for influenza outbreaks.

The worst reports in B.C. this winter were from the upper Fraser valley and Trail, were absenteeism rates were running to 20 per cent two weeks ago.

Uvic Governors Back Partridge

The University of Victoria's board of governors announced Monday full and unanimous support for president Bruce Partridge in the contract and tenure dispute which has disrupted the campus for the past four months.

In an afternoon press release the board said it had "exhaustively considered the various representations made by students, faculty, and members of the public over the past several months."

The release said the board wished to record its "complete confidence in the ability and integrity of President Partridge, and further, to express unanimously its full support of the president."

The statement triggered activity among students, who said in a press release Monday night that the board's statement "cuts off all means of legitimate appeal for the majority of students who oppose the arbitrary actions of the president."

Issued by the steering committee of the Alma Mater Society, the release charges Partridge with attempting to precipitate violence on the campus.

It said Partridge has many times stated he thinks students would like to riot at Uvic.

"We feel that nobody wants one as badly as Bruce Partridge," the release said.

President Trying To Incite Riots Charge Students

Canadian way of resolving disputes with "an alien philosophy of legalism and insensitivity.

"Bruce Partridge brought an American ideology of management to the University of Victoria, and the students in response may be forced to assume the character of their American contemporaries."

But in another release this morning the steering committee strongly rejected violence as an alternative at Uvic.

"The attempt by Partridge to put a lid on what is still a matter of genuine concern to most people in the university will inevitably lead to more vociferous argument and frustration.

"This is the climate in which the irresponsible edict of the president could produce an irresponsible act by an individual.

"We reject both forms of irresponsibility . . ." the release said.

Steering committee member Norman Wright accused the Daily Colonist of "utterly distorting" student aims in a story this morning that said student violence might result from the board's statement.

The Colonist quoted Martlet editor Robert Higinbotham as telling the newspaper he thought there would be violence on campus.

"I was not interviewed by the Colonist," he said this morning.

Contractors Alerted To Watch Their Bids

Higher bids on a proposed $4 million retirement centre in Oak Bay by National Nursing Homes Ltd. could be the end result of a telegram sent today by the International Union of Operating Engineers to the Construction Labor Relations Association.

The telegram, sent by engineers international representative Cliff Parker of Victoria to CLRA president Charles Connaghan of Vancouver, makes no mention of bidding on the proposed development.

But the unspoken implication of the telegram is that, given the possibility of a dispute at the site, contractors and sub-contractors would boost their bids to ensure against a possible loss.

The message simply says the union "views with apprehension" the refusal of National Nursing Homes Ltd., Vancouver, to negotiate with striking employees of Sandringham Private Hospital, 1650 Fort.

90 PATIENTS

National Nursing Homes Ltd. manages Sandringham on behalf of the owners, two Vancouver businessmen. Hospital employees, members of Local 1311 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have been on strike for six months seeking a first contract.

The CLRA represents more than 600 B.C. contractors. The International Union of Operating Engineers is responsible for excavation and servicing of equipment on construction sites.

Oak Bay council approved the retirement centre at a public hearing Dec. 21. It will be built at the corner of Cadboro Bay Road and Bowker Avenue.

MEETING SET

Copies of the telegram were sent to Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, the Amalgamated Construction Association, the B.C. and Yukon Construction Trades, Council, Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council, B.C. Federation of Labor and Victoria Labor Council.

Union officials, meanwhile, were to meet Wednesday with Ray Mercer of Vancouver, western director of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, about the Sandringham strike and a picket line incident last week.

Mayor Haddock has promised to look into the incident, in which the police report said Island Security Patrol office reported one of its men "struck a pedestrian in the driveway" of the hospital.

The patrol man, Robert James Wilson, 1037 Wychbury, stopped for pedestrian John R. Reid, 2511 Dowler, then drove forward and "Reid mounted the hood" and travelled about 40 feet, slipping off when the car stopped, the police report said.

The police report concluded "no police action."

Island Security was hired by Sandringham more than a week ago to patrol its property.

Two storage tanks at the Standard Oil depot on Harbor Road, punctured by bullets Thursday night after the company delivered furnace oil to Sandringham, are being repaired.

Fred Moore, assistant manager of the company in Victoria, said the tanks have been drained and are being aired.

Mrs. Margaret Reynolds, administrator of Sandringham, denied the hospital has opened any letters addressed to union officials there. They were returned marked "not here," she said.

NO MORE BOOKS

Monday, Alex Markides, staff representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said Social Credit MLAs had replied to a union letter by addressing them to Sandringham and when the letters were received by the union they were opened. Markides said he is sure the post office didn't open them.

She also said Greater Victoria Public Library has discontinued its shut-in delivery service to the hospital.

Librarian Donald Miller said "as far as I know, the board has made no decision."

Mayor Gags Town Crier Plea

"John Butts" is back, but he's not wanted.

His real name is Dennis Scherk, he's 26, plays in a rock group known as As Sheriff and wants to revive the town crier job John Butts started in 1859. But Mayor Courtney Haddock doesn't go for the idea.

Victoria's first town crier "was fat, incurably lazy, a drunkard, thief, beggar and bootlegger . . . and Victoria loved him," according to newspaper accounts of the day.

It was John Butts duty to announce details of important events. The citizens were amused, but the courts got a bit fed up with his frequent visits.

Dennis Scherk, of 964½ Byng, thinks "it would be fun to spread the news of events that took place 100 years ago" during this year's centennial celebrations. He would also attend official functions and let Victorians know what's going on.

"I didn't have money in mind when I thought of it last October, most of all I needed a part-time job, and I think it would be neat to have a town crier in town," Scherk said.

•

Mayor Haddock said he couldn't support Scherk's proposal, because "town criers are a dead issue to today's society."

Island Work For Students To Be Outlined

Specific projects which may come under Ottawa's $58 million student summer work program will be detailed Wednesday at a meeting to be attended by representatives from conservation and outdoors clubs.

Chairman Alan Meadows said that at a preliminary meeting such projects discussed included stream bank planting, clearing of adjacent trails to West Coast Trail, Environmental 100 staffing, urban beach clean-up, historic site improvements, salmon fry salvage on streams at low water, stump clearing from lakes and streams.

The Wednesday meeting, 7:30 at the Chief Petty Officers' mess on Esquimalt Road, will outline further these and any other projects, staffing and the availability of supervisors.

Ottawa, in announcing the plan, hoped 400 students will be employed on Vancouver Island for the summer.

Murder Case Reward Totals $400

The final total of rewards handed out for information that helped solve the Mulholland murder comes to $400, a police commission spokesman said today.

Names of the two recipients, who receive $300 and $100, have been withheld.

A total of $2,300 was offered in reward money, but the police commission decided on a smaller amount because the information given did not lead directly to arrest and conviction.

Taxi driver Gerald Mulholland, 37, was slain Nov. 10.

William Albert Larlham, 20, and Gary George Smith, 18, both of CFB Esquimalt, were sentenced Jan. 21 to 10-year prison terms.

Province to Put Clamps On Region Park Leasing

Regional districts will be forbidden to lease their parklands for more than five years and will be ordered to prepare regional park plans, Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said Monday.

Kiernan said another provision of the bill allows regional districts to establish "regional trails" on access land to existing regional parks. This eliminates the necessity of regional districts buying access land.

FIVE YEARS

Regional boards will have five years to prepare their park plans. The plans must be approved by the minister and put into bylaw form.

Kiernan said this will prevent haphazard development of regional parks. Some regionale districts want to establish parks on Indian reserves, Kiernan said. So the bill has a section allowing parks on leased land provided that the lease is at least 21 years.

Another feature of the bill allows regional board representatives from unorganized areas to sit on parks boards when parks have been created in electoral districts.

The controversial Witty's Lagoon lease to Colwood Trail Riders, he pointed out, was for five years.

He said the emphasis has been on acquisition but there had been a gradual shift — to money in the case of the Capital Regional District for development.

"Acquisition should still remain the primary goal but it is reasonalbe for regions to start their planning as we have already," he said.

$515 DONATED TOWARDS RESCUE BOAT

Donations totalled $545 today as citizens poured cash and cheques into the Percy Brown Trust Fund to provide a rescue vessell for the Beechey Head area.

Brown, who saved two lives when a troller capsized in the area March 13, has bought and launched a 17-foot vessel to be used for rescue work. He borrowed the $4,000 to buy the boat.

Brown, 33, said an antique car collector would make him an offer this afternoon on his Model T Ford, with the money to be added to the fund if the car is sold.

Housing Planned At Pit Area

Development of a major residential complex is being studied for the Ocean Cement Co. gravel pit property on Metchosin Road.

No announcement of plans or details are expected for at least two months, a company spokesman said, but the project would include single family as well as apartment or condominium housing.

Fund Honors Lort

Former chief librarian John C. Lort of the Greater Victoria Public Library has been honored by a student loan fund set up at the University of Victoria.

Named the John C. Lort Revolving Loan Fund, it has been established through donations made by the library's staff and members of the public.

Arthur Mayse . . .

BY HAPPY CHANCE, Teachers Strike Friday ran its course in a veritable sunburst of fine weather. And if anyone wants to know how hundreds of Vancouver Island kids spent their holiday, I can offer a rundown.

With sunshine for company, on bike or on foot, they took to the highway.

Some carried packs and had goals. Others rode, hoofed or thumbed along, footloose and fancy free.

As a traveller cruising our great north road, I can also report that more than a few went fishing on a day made to order for a boy with a rod. We glimpsed young anglers on Colquitz, patiently dunking. Up near Miracle Beach, we were gladdened by the sight of a steelhead, boy-escorted, that had quitted Black Creek a matter of minutes earlier.

For that student and the others, it was an odd sort of holiday. It didn't fit the pattern: It had no place in the scheduled scheme of things, and perhaps for this very reason, it carried a special glow.

It was kind of like sanctioned hookey-playing, unmarred by the prospect of penalties to follow.

The school buses weren't running. Each country school we passed had a closed and empty look.

Outside one little school in Qualicum country, two teachers sat in a parked car. A placard on the side of the car proclaimed in bold black letters, "ON STRIKE."

For these unaccustomed pickets, the occasion was a serious one, with much more than the loss of a day's pay involved.

But for their charges who took to the outdoors, it was the sort of break that doesn't come too often in a lifetime. Spring arrived, and a day of unearned, unorthodox, perfectly splendid freedom to spend on it!

I know a man who lives in a pocket of wilderness up near the top of the Gulf of Georgia. He has a long, winding, freshwater slough on his property, and he is involved in a form of guerrilla warfare with a colony of clever engineers who are determined to make that slough much bigger.

A narrow woods road crosses the waterway at its lower end. Under this road is a large culvert through which the slough is supposed to drain its excess into a channel that leads to the gulf.

We were strolling the road last Saturday when our host, who seeks to live at peace with nature, came to a sudden halt. He peered up the slough, which appeared to be pretty full, then hopped down to a handy rock by a culvert exit that wasn't releasing much of a flow.

"Damn those beavers!" he grumbled. "They've been at it again . . . Come and take a look."

Crouched and squinting into the culvert, we saw that it was largely blocked at the slough end by a higgledy-piggledy barricade of sticks and severed branches.

The beavers George damned are out to dam his culvert. He on his part is equally determined that the culvert will stay open. But as fast as he foils their efforts, the beavers get busy and rebuild.

This contest has been seesawing back and forth for quite a while now, and it is plain that neither George nor the flat-tails have any intention of giving up.

But until or unless George calls in reinforcements, I'm betting on that tribe of eager beavers.

To gladden a rainy day, here's a letter on bluelined paper with stars, hearts and flowers crayoned around its borders. It's from a young lady in Grade 1 at George Jay elementary, and a nicer note with neater printing, I've never had.

"Thank you for telling all the grandmothers and grandfathers who talked with us when we were making butter that we are glad they came.

"I might write a column for a newspaper when I grow up. Maybe I'll see you then.

"Love from Josina."

9 IN MEMORIAM

JOHNNY-WYSE—Meriet Johnny and Patricia Wyse, who passed away March 22, 1970.
We are sad within our memory,
Lonely are our hearts today;
For the ones we loved so dearly
Has forever been called away.
We think of them in silence
No eye may see us weep;
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

Hepatitis Shot May Work Like Polio Vaccine

NEW YORK (Reuter)—Scientists have found a way to immunize people against serum hepatitis that may control the disease in the way the Salk vaccine virtually ended polio, it was announced today.

The New York University Medical Centre said it considered the work of Prof. Saul Krugman and two associates to be "a significant accomplishment toward the development of a vaccine for the control of the disease, much as poliomyelitis has been controlled by vaccines."

Hepatitis is a virus-caused disease, attacking the liver and causing jaundice, nausea, weakness and other symptoms.

Serum hepatitis is an inflammation of the liver caused by transfusion of contaminated blood or plasma and by the use of poorly sterilized hypodermic needles and other medical equipment. It can also be passed on by an infected person.

THERE'S ANOTHER KIND

Prof. Krugman said recent observations by his team, which has been studying hepatitis since 1956, indicated that the boiling for one minute of serum made from the MS-2 (serum hepatitis) strain of virus destroyed the substance's ability to infect without affecting its ability to stimulate production of antibodies against the disease.

The scientist said his team had been successful in fighting the disease by both active immunization—the injection of a virus into a body which then produces antibodies—and passive immunization—the direct injection of antibodies.

Active immunization, he said was induced by the inoculation of a boiled preparation of MS-2 serum in distilled water.

Two inoculations were more effective than one but one inoculation gave enough protection to prevent some cases and modify others. Those receiving two injections of the boiled serum were not only protected against hepatitis but they also developed antibodies against the disease.

The studies were conducted with a comparatively small number of participants and further testing is necessary, he added.

was prepared to offer and because Brown wanted to continue as president of Home Oil after a sale.

The same reasons were the reported cause for the failure of earlier negotiations to find a private Canadian buyer for Brown's shares.

Home Oil is Canada's largest non-foreign owned oil company, with assets of about $250 million. Its sale to Ashland would have put nearly all the Canadian oil industry under American control.

At present, more than 80 per cent of the Canadian oil industry is foreign controlled, mostly by Americans, and foreigners control 99 per cent of the country's oil refining industry.

OFFERED $20 M

Although Home's assets are worth $250 million, only its limited "B" shares are voting stock. Cygnus Corp., a holding company controlled by Brown, also issued "A" and "B" stock, with only the "B" stock voting.

Brown currently owns 50.4 per cent of the Cygnus "B" stock and Cygnus holds 43.6 per cent of the Home "B" stock.

The actual market value of the controlling Cygnus shares is estimated at about $10 million, but Ashland reportedly had offered more than $20 million to Brown for the shares.

could not participate because he had been ousted from the Unionist parliamentary group for opposing official policies.

But Craig, while short on support in the caucus, claimed control of more than half the Unionist party's district branches, raising the prospect that he could be elected leader of the party at a convention scheduled Monday.

James Chichester-Clark quit as prime minister and party leader last weekend because the British government would not approve tougher measures against Roman Catholic extremists of the IRA.

Generally the prime minister also is elected party leader. But in this case there appeared to be a chance that different men would hold the two jobs.

The IRA's ultra-militant "provisional" wing in a statement from Dublin today claimed responsibility for the downfall of both Chichester Clark and his predecessor, Capt. Terence O'Neill.

It pledged that the "British occupation force will be eventually driven out as well as Unionism and all it stands for."

WILL RETALIATE

The IRA provisionals said they would "vigorously pursue in the face of even greater aggression the policy of retaliation against British forces for brutalizing the Irish people."

It appealed to Irishmen at home and abroad for support "in this grave hour of our national crisis."

At least 20 persons have died this year during the IRA campaign to unite the province with the Irish Republic.

Centennial Decoration Contest Set

A chance to brighten up Victoria for the royal visit and win a prize in the process has been offered merchants of the four central municipalities by Greater Victoria centennial '71 committee.

A contest for the best decorations in various categories of stores was authorized Monday by the centennial committee, which named director Alf Pettersen organizer.

Target of the competition is the week of April 25-30, with judging and awards to take place the last day.

City hall will be in full regalia by then, and on April 26 Mayor Courtney Haddock will run the ensign up the mast in Centennial Square to mark flag-raising day in B.C.

By May 3 when the Queen and members of the Royal Family arrive in the capital, Victoria is expected to be ablaze with colored bunting, flags, pennants and the usual glory of spring blossoms.

Overdue Boat Found Safe At Ganges

A boat reported overdue on a trip from Brentwood Bay to Ladner on the mainland was found at Ganges, Salt Spring Island, this morning, with all five of its occupants safe.

The operator of the 24-foot power cruiser Free Wind, Dennis Crane of Ladner, had ducked into Ganges for shelter from rough weather.

Also aboard the craft was Mrs. Rodstrom of the same address, two boys, aged six and seven, and Kelly Thompson, 11, of 4979 47th Ave. on the mainland.

None suffered any ill effects and at noon Crane was waiting for favorable weather to make the Strait crossing.

BLOOMING HOT SPOTS DETAILED

The city parks department today listed names of trees and where they can be seen:

Japan Higan cherry, Manor Road, Southgate, St. Andrews and 100 block Robertson Street; double pink flowering plum, Meares, Collinson and Lawndale Ave.; forsythia and red currant, Ross Bay Cemetery and main parking lot in Beacon Hill Park; purple-leafed flowering plum, Beechwood, Finlayson, Government, Haultain, McKenzie, Oliphant, Princess and Yates Streets; pink flowering plum, Beechwood, Vancouver, Wellington and Woodstock; Lindsay plum, Richmond Ave. from Chandler to Quamichan Street and Gorge Road west of the overpass; Wada's cherry, Blanshard Street hill by the B.C. three years that a U.S. warplane had been hit by a SAM.

South Vietnamese forces were rapidly closing out their campaign. A spokesman said another 7,000 troops had withdrawn across the border, leaving 5,000 in Laos out of the peak force of 22,000.

RUN GAUNTLET

Associated Press correspondent Holger Jensen reported from an abandoned fire base near a border crossing point that remnants of one South Vietnamese armored column loaded with several hundred paratroops raced across the border today through a gauntlet of heavy North Vietnamese fire.

American mechanized units lined Highway 9 to protect the retreating South Vietnamese and prevent pursuing North Vietnamese tanks from crossing the border. Jensen said a fleet of U.S. helicopter gunships made continuous rocket and strafing runs on both sides of the bomb-cratered highway, while jet fighter-bombers struck North Vietnamese positions less than half a mile away.

A South Vietnamese armored column of 102 tanks, armored personnel carriers and trucks crossed into South Vietnam from Laos this morning after fighting its way for three days around a North Vietnamese roadblock.

NIXON PLEASED

The president said he would announce next month another troop withdrawal that would continue the U.S. pull out at least at the present rate of 12,500 men a month.

Nixon told a television audience in a live broadcast that the three major goals of the Laotian campaign had been achieved. He said these were to ensure continued American withdrawals from South Vietnam, give protection for troops remaining there, and provide proof that the South Vietnamese, man for man, could defend themselves.

In an hour-long interview Nixon spoke with high optimism about the progress of the war, the Laotian campaign, and the prospects for continued U.S. disengagement.

DISCOUNTS REPORTS

The president discounted the impact made by press reports and television film depicting the current South Vietnamese withdrawal as a disorderly rout.

He said they gave only a small part of the picture and did not show how well most of Saigon's troops had performed.

In Paris, however, North Vietnam rejected today Nixon's claims and said the South Vietnamese incursion had failed completely.

"The criminal operation undertaken in southern Laos by the United States and the Saigon puppet administration for nearly two months has completely failed," the spokesman of Hanoi's Paris peace talks delegation said in a statement.

The spokesman said more than 10,000 Saigon troops and thousands of American soldiers and airmen had been put out of action in southern Laos and on the Khe Sanh front.

The South Vietnamese pullback has produced a welter of conflicting assessments outside the U.S. administration. But, as pieced together, the official assessment looks something like this:

GOAL DISRUPTED

The long-range goal of the operation was to make it impossible for the Communists to carry out a major offensive that allied intelligence showed they were planning for August, in time to disrupt the South Vietnamese presidential elections scheduled in the fall. A number of planned objectives were achieved, but the Communists reacted more fiercely than the U.S. planners had thought they would.

Intelligence estimates showed that there were only 1½ North Vietnamese divisions in the region of the South Vietnamese incursion. It was thought that those forces would fade away, as they did in Cambodia last year. Instead, the Communists threw in everything they could get together — a total of four divisions. They also had another surprise. The committed almost a third of the total North Vietnamese tank force.

The current view is that pressure on the rear of the Saigon forces will continue and Hanoi's armored and ground troops might try to continue their current push into South Vietnam.

Strong Earthquake on Norway Isle

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — A strong earthquake on the Norwegian island of Jan Mayen in the Arctic Ocean today measured 5.7 on the Richter scale, the Uppsala Seismological Institution reported.

Prof. Marcus Baath, director of the institute, said the quake on the sparsely populated island 640 miles east of Tromso was "uncommonly strong, considering the area concerned."

The University of California seismographic laboratory at Berkeley also reported the quake at 4:36 a.m. EST and measured it at 6:25 on the Richter scale. It placed the quake in the ocean between Jan Mayen and Spitsbergen, 600 miles northeast of the island, Spitsbergen, an archipelago 400 miles east of Norway, also belongs to Norway. It is not heavily populated.

A second strong quake, believed to have occurred in northwestern Iran, was recorded at 4:26 a.m. EST by the Central Institute for Meteorology and Geodynamics in Vienna. It measured 6.2 on the Richter scale.

Young Offenders Bill Returns To Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Second reading of the young offenders bill, subject of more adjectives than an unpopular tax, resumed in the Commons Monday night after two months of second thoughts by the government.

Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer yanked the bill in January after opposition MPs read a riot of complaints against the proposed replacement for the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

It was described as a junior Criminal Code and a "simplistic Spiro Agnew approach" to youthful offenders.

Debate on the bill was to resume today.

Mr. Goyer defended the legislation as a switch to legal protection and away from paternalism. However, he has indicated changes will be made.

In other business Monday, the Commons:

—Passed Justice Minister John Turner's arrest and bail reform bill hoping police and courts will observe its spirit.

PLAN OUTLINED

In a statement, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury sketched to a skeptical opposition plans to hire 276 Francophone graduates under a special program this year.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said later his party hasn't decided whether or not to support the idea, aimed at providing equality of opportunity for French-speaking Canadians in the chartered banks were singled out for criticism. MPs pointed angrily at recent service-charge increases and at criticism by the banks of government policy.

Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, was singled out by New-Democrats and Creditistes for warning that unemployment may be necessary to avoid another bout of inflation.

Creditiste Gerard Laprise (Abitibi) proposed that Mr. Rasminsky's salary be reduced to that of the average unemployed worker.

On the textile bill, Paul St. Pierre (L—Coast-Chilcotin) warned that the consumer always pays for protectionism.

ASK PUBLIC ROLE

He and other MPs fought for amendments that would open decisions of a proposed textile and clothing board to public scrutiny.

One clause in the textile bill would allow government to lift imports of any product found after investigation by the federal anti-dumping tribunal, to be damaging domestic industries.

Deferred votes on five amendments to the bill, including one by Mr. St. Pierre, will be taken today. A vote on Mr. St. Pierre's amendment, opposed by the government, was forced by four western Liberals, including Mr. St. Pierre, as well as six Conservatives.

The young offenders bill, which has raised hackles in welfare agencies and juvenile courts, ran into a continued adjectival assault as Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) said it is stiff, formal and punitive.

TORY PROTESTS

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina), former RCMP sergeant, said youths will still be locked up "and put away from the help they need so desperately."

He said the bill should be broken into two parts—a bill of rights for the young, which the government says it is, and a section emphasizing treatment and a close-to-home atmosphere.

The bill defines a young offender as a person between 10 and 21.

The maximum age for trial in family courts would be 17 in all provinces but Quebec and Manitoba, where it would be 18. It would be 18 for girls in Alberta.

The higher age provision has drawn fire in Ontario, where government estimates it would cost $20 million to provide facilities. The Ontario maximum now is 16.

West Germans Buy Phantoms

BONN (AP) — The West German defence ministry announced today it plans to buy F-4 Phantom jets from the United States to replace its ill-fated F-104G Starfighters and its G-91 Fiat jets.

The announcement made no mention of the number of planes to be bought, but ministry sources said the total would be between 175 and 229. Such an order would be worth more than $1,000 million.

The Phantoms are expected to begin joining the Luftwaffe in 1974, officials said.

They are to serve as a transitional plane until the 1980s, when West Germany's armed forces are to be equipped with the multi-role combat aircraft, or MRCA, being developed by Britain, West Germany and Italy.

FISHERIES TECHNOLOGISTS MEET

Protein Use Under Study

Removal and utilization of protein from fish waste is one of the main items being studied by 100 specialists attending the 22nd annual meeting of the Pacific Fisheries Technologists at the Empress Hotel.

In an interview today, president Dr. Neil Tomlinson said the scientists are exploring the possibilities of converting the waste material into fertilizer and other products in an economical manner.

Acting director of the fisheries research board's Vancouver laboratory, Tomlinson said much of the fish pieces not used in canneries could be made into a powdered supplement rich in protein.

A reduction plant, using such material and "scrap fish" not used for the commercial market, is being set up on the east coast.

Tomlinson said this method of processing has been used "between 20 and 30 years" but has proven a failure in its original aim of providing food to undeveloped countries because they cannot afford to buy.

"A plant in Chile, as an example, has never really got off the ground."

Tomlinson feels the supplement could be used in breads and other food products by countries like Canada who could afford it.

He was optimistic about the amount of mercury being monitored in local waters.

"Chloralkalile plants, such as pulp mills have been mostly cleaned up or have reduced the amounts to minimum."

Tomlinson said the meeting is also concerned with the problem of pesticide residue in foods.

Another item under discussion is the setting of standard packaging and quality for food sold on an international basis.

Practise Available For Postal System

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians writing letters to MPs, government departments or friends in Ottawa will be able to practise with a new postal code after April 1.

But since the machines required to read the new codes won't be installed for "about 15 months that's all it will be — practice.

At a news conference Monday, Jean-Pierre Cote, minister responsible for the post office, said the new system for addressing letters will be in effect by 1974, when machinery will be installed in 15 major post offices across the country, including Victoria.

But Canadians will be given and encouraged to use their code numbers over the next few months. A promotional program expected to cost "some hundreds of thousands of dollars" will be implemented to encourage people to use the new codes, Cote said.

It is hoped that by the time the machines are ready, Canadians will be in the habit of using their codes. Total cost of the new system is expected to be between $60 and $80 million.

BETTER THAN ZIP CODE

Cote said the new code will speed the work of sorting and sending Canada's estimated 5 billion yearly pieces of mail.

He described the code system, based on a combination of three numbers and three letters from the alphabet, as superior to the all-number zip code used in the United States and an improvement over a similar coding system in Britain.

Its biggest asset is that the combination of letters and figures allow machines to sort mail for individual businesses, apartment houses with more than 50 suites, and for homes in a single city block. Neither the American nor the British system can do this.

Before the Judge

A 26-year-old man was sentenced to three years in prison Monday by Judge William Ostler when he pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft.

Ostler said there was "a clear duty" upon him to impose sentences that are a deterrent in cases in which a particular kind of crime is increasing.

The accused, Neil L. Lyman, address unknown, has a criminal record that stretches back to 1960 and includes convictions for breakins, theft and uttering offences.

Court was told that Lyman was seen March 2 about 2:15 a.m. crawling from a clothing store at 1402 Douglas.

He was caught, an officer testified, following a chase. A cufflink set belonging to the store was found in his possession.

Clothing was found moved inside the store and placed near the doors.

Gerald Robert Johnson, 20, of 1346 May, was remanded by Ostler to April 1 for presentence report after he pleaded guilty to unlawfully using a knitting needle with intent to procure a miscarriage.

The incident occurred, the officer said, "on or about March 13" at a Victoria motel.

★ ★ ★

A 30-year-old city woman was fined $250 when she pleaded guilty to shoplifting merchandise totalling $28 from Simpsons-Sears.

Judge Ostler imposed the fine on Evelina F. Reda, 2816 Shakespeare.

A store security officer testified the accused was observed leaving the store about 2:15 p.m. March 19 with woman's clothing and babywear she hadn't paid for.

Mysterious Burns Found On Dead Man

City police started an investigation over the weekend into the death last week of an 80-year-old man who was found with mysterious burns to the back of his head.

Mar Quan Pon was found Thursday afternoon in his room by another resident of the rooming house at 534 Fisgard.

The man was still alive when found but died shortly afterward.

Abrasions were noted on the back of the victim's head which proved to be thermal burns through all the skin layers to the bone.

The man's room contained a stove but it was not believed to have been used for a week and there were no major electrical connections.

Police said it was understood Mar had not been out of his room between Monday and the time he was found.

Air Canada Boeing 747 In Vancouver

VANCOUVER — Air Canada Monday unveiled the pride of its fleet to 350 travel agents, journalists and other guests.

Featuring in-flight movies and six stereo channels, the 365-passenger aircraft cruises at 600 miles per hour.

The 747 is one of three such aircraft which Air Canada plans to employ on its Vancouver-Toronto route and various trans-Atlantic routes beginning April 25.

The 231-foot fuselage contains 12 washrooms and 15 flight attendants cater to passenger needs.

Old timers may recall that in 1938 Air Canada made its first trans-Canadian flight with a Lockheed 10 which carried only 14 passengers and no flight attendants.

Thieves Get $200 at Legion

Police reported $20 was taken from a machine on the basement level, $120 from another machine on the main floor and $60 from a third machine in the upstairs lounge.

RCMP Holding Arson Suspect

GOLD RIVER — A suspect is in custody in Vancouver and RCMP here are considering an arson charge following a logging camp fire Sunday in which a Victoria area man was killed.

An RCMP spokesman said any charges would be laid in Gold River after investigation is completed. The suspect's name was not released.

Donald Steigenberger, 256 Atkins, Langford died early Sunday when fire swept the bunkhouse in which he was sleeping. One other employee sleeping in the bunkhouse escaped uninjured.

Caravan Ready For Island Tour

Its agenda for next week is: Ganges, Wednesday, Sidney, Thursday, Sooke, Friday, Colwood, Saturday, Mill Bay, Sunday, Duncan, Tuesday, Lake Cowichan, Wednesday.

Blood Clinics Set for Uvic

A Red Cross blood clinic will be held at the University of Victoria in the Student Union Building Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

A blood clinic also will be held today at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort St. from 4:30 to 9 p.m.

Operation Necessary To Join This Club

A new club with a select membership is being formed, with membership drawn from Greater Victoria residents who have had operations leaving them with ileostomy, colostomy or ileal bladder.

First meeting will be held Thursday, March 25, at St. Christopher's Church Hall, Tillicum and Carey, at 8:13 p.m.

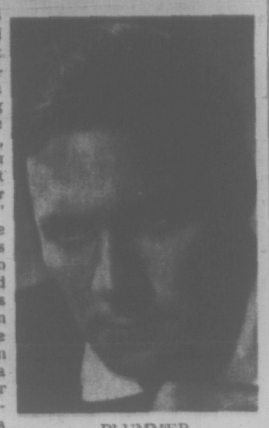
A level entrance will make it possible for wheelchair members to attend.

Membership is open to patients and one member of their immediate family. President is Mrs. Georgia Virag and Mrs. Aileen Barer RN will act as advisor.

The surgery involved is total or partial removal of the bowel or bladder, and may have been recently performed or done many years ago.

"The patient finds it difficult to adjust," Mrs. Virag said. "He or she needs a great deal of moral support, because it is a hard experience to go through alone."

Thursday night's meeting will deal with a constitution and a name for the new club.



PLUMMER

MIAMI — The teen-age girl who ran away from home and became involved in the Kent State University demonstrations has been committed to a children's home after running away a second time. The attorney for Mary Vecchio, 15, said she was sent to an institution at Kendall last week by Judge Sidney Weaver because he "had no choice." "When it became clear she was uncontrollable and it was in her best interests to commit her, he did so," said Philip Vitello, the girl's lawyer. "He would have been derelict in his duty if he hadn't." Mary ran away from her suburban Opa-Locka home last year and her parents learned of her whereabouts only when they saw a nationally-distributed picture of her kneeling beside one of four youths slain in the Kent State rioting.

WALLA WALLA, Wash. — A 110-year-old former bronco buster lays his claim for long life to daily amounts of cayenne pepper. "I'm still just a young man," says George Gibbs, who was born March 20, 1861, in Fort Worth, Tex., and lives alone in his small home. He still cuts his own firewood and does his own housekeeping and cooking. Gibbs never married. He says his eyesight is failing and his "bones are aching some now."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A temporary restraining order issued here prohibits the former accountant of entertainer Johnny Cash from removing funds from five local banks. Cash filed suit Monday against the accountant, Herman Clark, claiming Clark and his wife systematically converted more than $300,000 into three private bank accounts during the last year.

CRANBROOK. — Dale Merle Nelson, 31, of West Creston, B.C., declined Monday to enter pleas on two charges of non-capital murder laid after three adults and five children were slain in the West Creston area of the Kootenays Sept. 5, 1970. Not-guilty pleas were entered by the court for Nelson, on trial on two counts in the deaths of Tracy Wasyk, 7, and Catherine St. Amand, 8, Nelson arrested after one of B.C.'s largest manhunts, appeared calm as he entered the courtroom Monday morning but was shaking slightly as he stood to hear the charges against him read.

LONDON — A Mauser pistol carried by Sir Winston Churchill when he was a newspaper correspondent in the Boer War was sold today to U.S. movie producer Carl Foreman for $10,000. The pistol, engraved with the name W. L. S. Churchill, was lost by the young reporter when he was captured by the South Africans in 1899.

LONDON — Canadian-born actor Christopher Plummer has withdrawn from the title role in Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" at the National Theatre, a theatre spokesman said today. Plummer, who appeared in such films as "The Sound of Music" and "Waterloo", pulled out of the play after a disagreement over interpretation with the directors of the play, Manfred Wekwerth and Joachim Tenschert.

Leafs Raise Ticket Prices

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League will raise ticket prices by as much as $3.50 a seat for next month's Stanley Cup playoffs.

The club has announced that red seats normally costing $6.50 will be worth $10. The cheapest seats, the greys, will be boosted from $2.50 to $4. Blues, $5.50 during the regular season, will cost, $8.

Ex-Mountie Acquitted

EDMONTON (CP) — A retired RCMP officer was found not guilty in Supreme Court of Alberta Monday of possessing $252,000 in stolen stock certificates.

Mr. Justice M. E. Manning said that when Robert John Mawson, 44, of Burnaby was arrested in Vancouver, he had given RCMP a plausible explanation of his involvement with the stocks stolen in New Jersey in 1969.

Mawson, now in the security and investment field, said in a statement he told the people in the United States who wanted to sell the stocks that there was no use in sending highgrade securities to Canada if they could not be validated, "and as a result I had no reason to suspect anything was irregular when they were sent here."

Budget Approved

CALGARY (CP) — City Council approved a $74.8 million capital works budget Monday which included a $2 million provision for easing unemployment.

LIONS' CAMP ON MAINLAND

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League will hold their 1971 training camp at the University of British Columbia for the third season, the club announced Monday.

More than 75 players are expected to attend the camp, from June 14 to July 4. The Lions play their first preseason game July 5 against Edmonton Eskimos at Empire Stadium in Vancouver.

The Lions also announced Monday the signing of halfback Denis Green from Iowa University and tackle Victor Mittelberg from Michigan State University.

Baseball Wits Tune Up Early

By The Associated Press

Managers Gene Mauch and Billy Martin showed Monday their wits are all tuned up for the regular baseball season which opens in two weeks.

Mauch, whose Montreal Expos won an exhibition game last week on a double steal, out-thought the opposition again Monday, beating Washington Senators 5-3 with the winning run scoring on a squeeze bunt.

And Martin, returning to the big leagues as Detroit Tigers manager, used 26 players including eight pinch hitters to beat New York Yankees 5-4.

Elsewhere in exhibition baseball, San Diego Padres blasted California Angels 10-0, Pittsburgh Pirates clipped Kansas City Royals 8-4, Philadelphia Phillies trimmed Cincinnati Reds 8-7, New York Mets topped St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, Boston Red Sox bombed Los Angeles Dodgers, 10-5, Baltimore Orioles nipped Chicago White Sox 6-5, San Francisco Giants downed Cleveland Indians 5-2 and Chicago Cubs edged Oakland Athletics 5-4.

GETS RUN WITHOUT HIT

Mauch managed the Expos to a run without a hit in the seventh inning against Washington to break a 3-3 tie. Clyde Mashore opened with a walk and Mauch went to the bunting game, sacrificing the runner to second. Then Mashore stole third and raced home on Merv Staehle's bunt for the winning run.

Martin, meanwhile, managing as if the pennant hung in the balance, pulled out a hair-raiser against the Yankees with pinch hitter Kevin Collins delivering a two-run homer in the bottom of the 11th to win it.

The Tigers had tied it with a run in the bottom of the ninth, got another in the last of the 10th to tie it again after New York had scored, and then pulled it out in the 11th after the Yankees had gone ahead again.

San Diego punished Jim Maloney for all of their 10 runs in ripping California. Dave Campbell had three hits for the Padres, who collected 14 for the day.

ALLOWS TWO HITS

Philadelphia rallied for four runs in the ninth inning, the last two on Woody Woodward's error, to whip Cincinnati. Singles by Tim McCarver, Ron Stone, Don Money and Larry Bowa put the Phils' first two runs across in the ninth. Money, Oscar Gamble and Larry Hisle all homered for Philadelphia and Lee May had a three-run shot for the Reds.

St. Louis dropped its fifth straight game with pitcher Fred Norman's 10th inning throwing error allowing the Mets to score the winning run in a squeaker. Norman walked Ken Boswell with one out in the 10th and then threw away Tommie Agee's bouncer, allowing Boswell to score the deciding run.

Rico Petrocelli smashed a homer, double and single as Boston battered Los Angeles. Petrocelli drove in five runs and Billy Conigliaro also contributed three hits to the 14-hit Red Sox attack.

CAN'T MAKE NINE

Mike Cuellar's bid to go nine innings fell two outs short but Tom Dukes cut off a last White Sox rally to save Baltimore's victory over Chicago. Jay Johnstone's two-run double spoiled it for Cuellar.

Rookies George Foster and Fran Healy delivered key hits in a three-run eighth inning rally that moved San Francisco past Cleveland. Foster's run-scoring single broke a tie and then Healy followed with a two-run double.

Willie Mays homered for the Giants.

Hal Breeden's two-out double drove in the Cubs' winning run in the ninth inning against Oakland. Gary Jestadt had a three-run homer and Johnny Callison added a solo shot for the Cubs.

Hodge Now Canuck Scout

VANCOUVER (CP) — General Manager Bud Poile of the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League announced Monday that goaltender Charlie Hodge, who played in 15 of the club's 20 wins, has been relegated to the position of scout for the balance of the season.

Poile said George Gardner will start tonight against St. Louis Blues in Vancouver and Gardner will alternate with Dunc Wilson for the club's remaining eight games this season.

He said both goalies have complained of not getting enough ice time but the club can only protect two netminders on its roster in June so the next eight games will determine the futures of Gardner and Wilson with the club, as backup man to Hodge.

Belgian Race Banned

BRUSSELS (AP) — Lack of suitable safety measures has prompted the International Automobile Federation to drop a ban on the Grand Prix of Belgium, and race officials have cancelled this year's run, scheduled for early in June.

Miami, Dallas Lead Super Bowl Bidding

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Miami and Dallas were the leading candidates as the Super Bowl derby got under way today at the National Football League meetings with six cities bidding to hold pro football's glamor event next season.

Seven groups representing the six locals began presenting their cases before the assembled NFL owners at 15-minute intervals beginning at 10 a.m. EST, with a decision expected either late today or early Wednesday.

Other cities in the race are: New Orleans, Los Angeles, Houston seeking it for both the Astrodome and Rice Stadium, and Jacksonville, Fla.

The owners spent most of Mondays' opening day of the meetings in committee sessions, but there were these developments:

—The name of the Boston Patriots, changed only last month to Bay State Patriots, was changed again to New England Patriots.

—Ralph Wilson, owner of the Buffalo Bills, reported that progress had been made on a new stadium which, if continued to conclusion, would keep the club from moving to Seattle.

—Commissioner Pete Rozelle acknowledged the NFL could be faced with a problem if the ultimate legal ruling in the case involving Spencer Haywood of the National Basketball Association's Seattle SuperSonics forces the sport to do away with the ban on signing players before their college class graduates.

Break-Through In Auto Racing

SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — The United States has been awarded a second race in the world Grand Prix auto-racing circuit, thus breaking a precedent that, until now, has limited such events to one to a country.

The second race, to be known as the Western United States Grand Prix, will be held at the new $30 million racing facility at Ontario, Calif., April 9, 1972. It will carry a minimum purse of $250,000.

The Formula I world drivers' championship thus will have three stops in North America — the Canadian Grand Prix that alternates each year between Mosport, Ont., and St. Joviet, Que., and the U.S. Grand Prix at Watkins, Glen, N.Y., each October, in addition to the Ontario, Calif., event.

Argos Sign Pair

TORONTO (UPI) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League have signed two American players to their roster season, Ezell "Easy" Jones, an offensive tackle from the University of Minnesota, and Floyd Reese, a defensive tackle from UCLA.

Saigon Remnants Flee From Laos

Times News Services

KHE SANH — The remnants of South Vietnam's invasion forces fled across the border from Laos today under heavy Communist assault and U.S. support forces began pulling out of the country's northern border areas.

As the Laos operation drew to a close, North Vietnamese troops stepped up their attacks on the U.S. forces in the northerwest sector who backed the South Vietnamese in their 44-day drive to cut North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh trail.

North Vietnamese artillery, rockets, mortars and sappers hit the forward base of Khe Sanh near the Laotian border and eight other U.S. positions supporting the South Vietnamese in Laos.

GIs KILLED

The U.S. command reported seven Americans were killed and 40 wounded, but field reports said the casualties were higher.

Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported from the northern front that some U.S. helicopter units began pulling out of Khe Sanh and returning to their normal headquarters at Chu Lai and Phu Bai.

PROVIDED SUPPORT

Informed sources said it would be some time before the last U.S. units are withdrawn from western Quang Tri province, bordering Laos on the west and the demilitarized zone on the north.

About 10,000 U.S. troops were put into the sector Jan. 30 to act as a blocking force for the South Vietnamese and to support the Saigon forces with helicopters and supply movements.

It was understood that Khe Sanh itself would be closed within the next three weeks. Ham Nghi, the South Vietnamese forward command post for the operation nearby, now is in the process of closing out.

JETS HIT

DON'T COUNT NIXON OUT

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon clearly warned the pundits Monday night that they are running grave risks of being wrong when they speculate that he may not be a presidential candidate again next year.

The idea of voluntary retirement, raised by a television interviewer, is "quite premature," the U.S. president said. "I have made no decision with regard to what I will do in 1972 either for myself or the man who will run for vice-president."

The choice of words raised some doubts about the future of Vice-President Spiro Agnew, as the president did not take the opportunity to deny reports he may choose a Democrat, as Abraham Lincoln did in 1864, to be his running mate in 1972.

Laos Soldiers Retake Town Near Capital

Times News Services

VIENTIANE — Government troops have recaptured the closest government position to Luang Prabang which was overrun by two North Vietnamese companies early today, Laotian military sources said.

They said the North Vietnamese captured the position at the village of Ban Cho, about two miles northeast of the royal capital.

However, royal Lao army troops defending Luang Prabang later drove them out after several hours of heavy fighting.

Meanwhile in London, Laotian premier Prince Souvanna Phouma called for Britain and Russia to act urgently to remove the Communist-led military threat against Luang Prabang.

Ottawa-Home Oil Deal Collapses

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian government Tuesday withdrew its bid to acquire control of Home Oil Co. Ltd. and announced that private Canadian buyers were now negotiating for control of the company.

J. J. Greene, minister of energy, mines and resources, told the Commons that he had failed to reach a "firm understanding" in negotiations which began March 11.

He said he was now confident that a buyer would be found in the private sector who would maintain "Canadian ownership and full Canadian control of Home Oil."

The controversial negotiations to acquire control of Home Oil were begun after the government effectively blocked efforts by Home Oil's president, R. A. Brown, Jr., of Calgary, to sell his controlling shares to the Ashland Oil Co. Ltd. of Kentucky.

NO AUTHORITY

Acknowledging that it did not have the legislative authority to tell Brown what to do with his shares, the government first tried to find a Canadian buyer in the private sector. When this failed, the government began negotiations to acquire the shares itself to prevent them from falling into foreign hands.

Greene said it would not be in the best interests of either the government or Brown to disclose the reasons why the negotiations did not succeed.

He said Brown "understands the attitude of the Canadian government" that a sale to foreign interests would be unacceptable.

The minister said "Canadian buyers" were now negotiating with Brown and a sale to them would be "in accord with the government's objective."

He said the government would "continue to keep the situation under close surveillance."

Army Coup Failure Reported

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (UPI) — Rebellious troops fought a gun battle with palace guards today in an abortive attempt to assassinate Sierra Leone Premier Saika Stevens and seize control of the government of the West African coastal country.

Government sources said guards shot and killed two soldiers and wounded several others when they tried to enter the premier's residence.

STATION SEIZED

They said the rebel troops also seized the capital's radio station before they were overcome by government forces. Broadcasting from the station stopped during the abortive coup but the radio made no mention of the attempt.

Several members of the armed forces were arrested, the sources said.

(Neighboring Guinea declared a state of emergency following the attempted Guinean voice of the revolution radio reported. A broadcast monitored in Abidjan said the high command in Guinea had ordered "all military garrisons to be in a state of alert until further notice" and a close guard was ordered kept on the frontier with Sierra Leone.)

ECM Policies Spark Huge Farm Protest

BRUSSELS (AP) — About 60,000 farmers from the six Common Market countries marched into downtown Brussels with pitch forks waving today in a massive demonstration for higher prices and more aid.

A witness said one farmer was shot and wounded in the back by a policeman during an outbreak of violence along the march route.

The ministers are holding a three-day meeting on prices for the season beginning April 1. The ministers, recalling the cows brought into a recent session by protesting farmers, were meeting a mile and a half away — on the top floor of a 15-storey building.

Mansholt pleaded with the ministers for joint financing of his plan to modernize farming in the six countries. It would increase the size of farms and help small, inefficient farmers to leave the land. But Mansholt does not want to raise prices as high as the farmers would like.

ARMED FORCES SEIZE POWER

Argentine Head Ousted

By HAROLD SINNOTT

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — The armed forces seized power in a bloodless coup early today, ending a long-simmering dispute between military leaders and deposed President Roberto M. Levingston about the handling of labor disputes and general unrest in the country.

Another reason for the coup, The Associated Press said, was that the president wanted to put off elections for another four or five years.

Levingston, who took a harder line on the disputes than the military, will be replaced by a three-man junta, one member chosen from each of the services.

Levingston, 51, who was himself appointed by the armed forces, had been in power for only nine months. He took office last June after the armed forces ousted the regime of Juan Carlos Ongania.

Levingston, an army general, is the ninth Argentine president to be ousted by a military coup in the last 40 years. The country of 23 million has had six military coups and several unsuccessful revolts in 40 years.

The announcement that the military now plans to run the country itself was made by the army commander-in-chief, Gen. Alejandro A. Lanusse.

The commanders of the navy and air force joined with Lanusse in removing the president because Levingston Monday tried to get rid of the army chief, who was opposed to the president's nationalist policies.

The statement by the commanders struck observers here as reaffirming plans for a return to democratic rule, which ended in Argentina when Ongania took power.

LAST-STAND BID

The president made a last-stand bid to bolster his increasingly shaky position by firing Lanusse in a nationwide broadcast Monday night. He said Lanusse was derelict in his duty by failing to tighten security measures in the province of Cordoba, a hotbed of serious riots and anti-government demonstrations in the last 10 days.

In the auto industry centre, rioting led by workers and students opposed to the government's economic and social policies left several persons dead, dozens injured and property damage estimated at $3.2 million.

Within an hour of his broadcast, it became apparent that Levingston had miscalculated the strength of Lanusse.

Communists Gather

MOSCOW (UPI) — Delegations of more than 80 of the world's Communist parties are scheduled to arrive here by the end of the week to attend the 24th Soviet Party Congress, Communist sources said today. All the ruling parties will be represented except China and Albania.

Threat Charge Laid

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Maxwell James Thoms, 19, of La Scie, Nfld., was charged in magistrate's court today at Gander in connection with a threatening letter received by Premier Joseph Smallwood during the Quebec FLQ crisis last fall. Thoms was remanded in custody for eight days and ordered taken to St. John's for a psychiatric examination.

RUSSIANS SET OFF SECOND N-BLAST

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) — The Uppsala Seismologic Institution today reported the second underground nuclear blast in two days in the Soviet Union.

Prof. Marcus Baath, the head of the institution, said the explosion was recorded at 2 a.m. EST from the western slope of Ural Mountains and had a magnitude of 5.9 points on the open-ended Richter scale. The Uppsala institution reported another underground nuclear blast Monday from the Semipalatinsk area of Siberia.

New Irish PM To Smash Terror

BELFAST (CP) — Brian Faulkner, a veteran in-fighter in Northern Ireland's political and religious strife, took over as premier today and pledged to "smash terrorism."

The 50-year-old Faulkner regarded as a moderate beat back the challenge of militant Protestant right-winger William Craig who wants to rearm the police and set up internment camps for suspected Irish Republican Army terrorists.

Faulkner, a skilful political manoeuvrer, promised the Protestant militants, who have accused British troops and reform advocates of being too soft on the IRA, that he would stamp out "not only terrorism and sabotage, but riots and disorder."

And he held out a pledge to the Roman Catholic minority that he would work for restoration of "confidence throughout the entire community." He said he did not want "harsh measures or repressive measures."

CAUCUS SHOWDOWN

The showdown in the two-man fight came in a caucus of the Protestant-based Unionist party.

Canada Can't Halt Pipeline, Says MP

TORONTO (CP) The United States will permit the construction of a trans-Alaska pipeline to carry Arctic oil to southern markets and "all the political pressure in Canada . . . isn't going to affect what the Americans do," Patrick Mahoney, Liberal MP for Calgary South, said Monday.

Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, said in an interview a Canadian pipeline will be built, but the Alaska line will come first.

"Ultimately, the need for petroleum resources would outweigh the damage that might be done to the North Slope of Alaska and the west coast of Canada," he said.

Mr. Mahoney said a Canadian pipeline down the Mackenzie River would not solve the crude oil shortage in California and that is why the Americans will build the Alaska route.

A group of seven major oil companies favor the 800-mile Alaska line and a west coast tanker route to move oil to Washington state from Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's northern coast.

Representatives of the companies concerned are due to meet Energy Minister J. J. Greene and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien in Ottawa Wednesday when the two ministers are expected to urge the adoption of the proposed Mackenzie River route.

ORGANISMS RECREATED IN LABORATORY

Scientists Look at Mars Life Compounds

By STUART AUERBACH

WASHINGTON (WP) — Compounds that are necessary for the creation of life are probably being formed by sunlight on the surface of Mars, three scientists reported Monday.

These organic compounds were produced in a laboratory under conditions simulating the Martian surface and its bombardment of ultra violet rays from the sun.

While the compounds — formaldehyde, acetaldehyde, and glycolic acid — are needed for life to exist, they are not enough by themselves to produce it.

"This is the most favorable indication for a possible Martian biological evolution that we have had in the last five years," said Dr. Norman O. Horowitz, one of the three scientists who worked on the experiments for the past year.

"There are still many uncertainties, however, which won't be resolved until we land on the planet in 1975."

The first unmanned landings on Mars are scheduled for 1975. However, two spacecraft will be launched in May to orbit the planet at close range for three months. They are scheduled to begin their orbits in November.

Horowitz, who has always been extremely cautious about the existence of any form of life on Mars, said the new findings increase the chance "from highly improbable to just improbable."

The chance that life exists on Mars had been dimmed by pictures and scientific instruments carried to within 2,000 miles of the surface of the red planet.

They showed a bleak, inhospitable surface and the absence of such vital elements for life as nitrogen.

They did, however, send back enough information about the surface of Mars, its atmosphere and the ultraviolet rays that bombard it to allow Dr. Horowitz and his colleagues, Drs. Jerry S. Hubbard and James P. Hardy, to build a model of the Martian surface.

The surface was made from either sterilized soil or crushed glass in a gas mixture of 97 per cent carbon dioxide, some carbon monoxide and water vapor.

CREATION UNEXPECTED

Horowitz said the unexpected creation of organic compounds was caused by the reaction of the simulated surface to the large amount of ultraviolet rays, previously believed to be incapable of producing such a reaction.

Formaldehyde and acetaldehyde are "important starting materials for the synthesis of a variety of organic compounds, including sugars," the three researchers said.

Horowitz said in a telephone interview that he believes the three organic compounds would react with ammonia — if there is any on Mars — to produce amino acids, the building blocks of proteins.

Their findings were published in the March issue of the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.
